Music Department To Conduct Workshop

A three-week workshop for teachers of elementary and advanced piano will be conducted by Dr. Hugh Williamson, head of the University music department, and Mme. Gertrude Tremblay-Baker, professor of piano, from June 11-July 1.

The course, which is designed for both those who teach individually and those who conduct classes, will treat modern principles of piano study for students at all levels of development. Teaching problems will also be stressed. The basic principles of tone production, interpretation, and teaching repertoire in the various grades will be discussed, and a demonstration in technical development will be offered.

The workshop will meet from 9 a. m. to 12 Monday through Friday.

Degrees from Oberlin

Dr. Williamson holds degrees from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music and New York University. He has studied under Mme. Josephine Bonazzi-Lytle, Josef and Rosina Lhevinne, and Edwin Hughes. He has been assisting artist to a number of famous soloists including Mildred Dilling, harpist; Frederic Baer, baritone; Phyllis Kreuter, cellist, and Marcel Hubert, cellist.

He was formerly professor of piano at William Woods College, dean of music at Flora MacDonald College, and guest director of music at the University of North Carolina. His pupils, who have appeared in concerts and as soloists with many orchestras, are occupying positions on college faculties as well as conducting private studios.

Studied Piano in Paris

Mme. Tremblay-Baker studied piano and composition under Vincent d'Indy at the Schola Cantorum in Paris. She is a specialist in piano pedagogy, having worked in this field with Alfred Cortot and Isidor Philipp. She has conducted master classes in interpretation and repertoire at the University of California.

Further information on the workshop may be obtained from the University music department.

Southern Fellowship Fund Awards Prof Flora Grant

University economics professor A. C. Flora, Jr., has been awarded a grant to write a doctoral dissertation on "The Development of Economic Thought in South Carolina from 1820 to 1860."

Prof. Flora has received an award from the Southern Fellowship Fund to complete Ph.D. requirements at the University of North Carolina where he previously studied from 1947 to 1950.

A specialist in economic theory, Prof. Flora is seeking "to reveal the thinking of theoretical economists with the aim of developing the extent of the influence of such thinking on the political expressions of the state."

Some of the major issues of the period, according to Professor Flora, were the protective tariff, internal improvements at federal government expense, and banking.

The leading economic theorists of the period were Thomas Cooper, the controversial president and political science professor at the South Carolina College, and Jacob N. Cardozo, editor of a Charleston newspaper, "The Southern Patriot."

Both men opposed protective tariff and favored free trade. Cooper was extreme to the point of nullification but Cardozo remained a unionist with the result that the financial strength of his newspaper was endangered.

Professor Flora will study at Chapel Hill from June through next February. A native of Columbia, his wife is the former Miss Sara Ellen Bethea of Latta.

The Southern Fellowship Fund is designed to improve the quality of teaching in the South by assisting young scholars to obtain graduate degrees.

New Dean Is Also Newspaper Editor

By Mary Alice Carhart
Feature Editor

Ever wonder what it would be like to hold down two demanding positions at the same time? If so, just ask Dean G. A. Buchanan who is the newly appointed dean of the school of journalism and also editor of the Columbia Record.

Of his role at the University (his alma mater), Dean Buchanan said he "finds it very stimulating." He went on to say that he expects to obtain from the students much helpful information that will aid him on his paper.

While a student at the University Dean Buchanan was president of the student body, managing editor of the Gamecock, and president of Euphradian Literary Society. It was during his term as student body president that he incorporated the athletic activities fee into the present student activities fee so as to include allotments for the Gamecock, Garnet and Black and the literary magazine.

Intended Law Study

Actually Dean Buchanan had intended to study law. He was offered a fellowship in psychology at Clark University, Worcester, Mass. From here he was to go to Harvard Law School.

However his first newspaper job must have proved so inviting as to cause him to forget law. During his last year at the University he began working on The State. He covered Camp Jackson (now Fort Jackson) during World War I.

From The State, he became city editor of the Charleston News and Courier. His next position was that as editor of the Columbia Record.

Received Big Story Award

As one would expect, a veteran newspaperman like Dean Buchanan has had numerous "scoops" and memorable reporting experiences. Perhaps his most noted story was his solving of a filling station murder for which he received the Big Story Award. An account of the Columbia murder which occurred 25 years ago appeared on both radio and television.

Another outstanding story of Dean Buchanan's was that of the Cleveland School fire in Camden in which 76 persons were burned to death. He is said to have typed the story of this tragedy while sitting on top of an automobile juggling a typewriter between his knees.

Other unforgettable reporting assignments were the Aiken lynching and the killing of Harry McCaw, former clerk of the South Carolina Supreme Court.

Important Associates

Ashley Halsey, Bill and Mason Brunson and Tom Warring are but a few of Buchanan's former newspaper associates who have gone on to become important journalistic figures. A University graduate, Mr. Halsey is now associate editor of the Saturday Evening Post.

Buchanan is equally as active outside of the newspaper field: He has served as president of the Columbia Chamber of Commerce (two years), Columbia Rotary Club, Art Association, and Executives Club. He was also a founder of the Executives Club.
