

China: 'Don't Negotiate'

By CARL STEPP
News Editor

The Communist Chinese are "doing their utmost . . . to make any kind of negotiations impossible" over Vietnam, an expert on China said here Monday.

Dr. Jurgen Domes, one of Germany's leading authorities on China, said the Red Chinese oppose negotiations for two reasons.

First, he said, they want a victory on the battlefield. A successful "war of national liberation" would strengthen the Chinese in their feud with the Soviet Union, while success at the bargaining table would boost the Soviets, he explained.

China also favors continuation of the war because it ties up American resources, Domes added.

However, he said, the Chinese efforts are proving unsuccessful.

The Soviet Union, on the other hand, would never discourage negotiations and would probably encourage them, Domes said.

The Soviets are becoming increasingly concerned that conflict in Vietnam prevents warming of U. S.-Soviet relations in Asia, the speaker said. Secondly, the Soviet military leaders are concerned about the "continuous in-combat training American soldiers are getting in Vietnam."

Discussing internal politics in Red China, Domes predicted that Communist rule on the Chinese mainland would one day be an "historical phenomenon."

"The call for freedom is an inseparable part of the revolution's program," Domes said. "As long as this call has not been realized, the Chinese revolution remains unfinished."

While the Communists have contributed to social change in China, he said, evidence indicates the revolution has "begun to surpass Chinese Communism."

Domes illustrated the call for freedom in China by referring to historical episodes as well as modern examples. In 1965, he said, a "general drive from many sections of society" called for "wholesale revision of Party policy."

instituted to combat this attitude, was itself influenced by the desire for freedom.

Now, Domes said, "The call is gradually—very gradually—reaching the masses."

Domes, a visiting associate professor in the Department of International Studies, said ending Communist rule in China would be a matter of "decades, not days." He mentioned the frustrated younger generation as possible agents to overthrow the Reds.

America's present Chinese policy of "containment with isolation" should be maintained until prospects appear good for a change in Chinese rule.

Relaxing policy toward China now would be a big victory for the ruling Party, Domes said. If evidence appears of internal change such as the change current in Czechoslovakia, America should "reassess" her policy, he added.

YAF To Present Films

The Carolina chapter of Young Americans for Freedom will present two films at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Russell House Assembly Room.

"China: The Roots of Madness," a special television documentary prepared by Theodore H. White, attempts to trace the revolutionary change in China from the nineteenth century to the present.

The film is divided into three time segments: "The Search for National Unity, 1800-1927," "Civil War and Invasion, 1927-1941," and "Rise of the Communist Power, 1941-1967."

The second film, "The Face of Free China," presents a tour of free China with special emphasis on economic development.

Giving instruction on the films will be James T. Myers, an instructor in the USC Departments of Political Science and International Studies. A former teaching assistant in the Far Eastern and Russian Institute of the University of Washington, Myers is working on a study of the dynamics of the "hero cult" of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Administration Installs Self-Service Postal Unit

A self-service postal unit soon will enable students to buy stamps and other mailing material whenever they want them.

The unit is to be installed on Sumter Street near the southwest corner of the Undergraduate Library within two weeks, according to Vice President for Business Affairs Harold Brunton.

Brunton said installation of self-service post offices is a new project of the Post Office Department. The campus facility was arranged after students requested longer post office hours, he said.

The University will supply the concrete pad and electrical power for the unit. The Post Office Department will provide the kiosk-style structure.
