

Learning disabilities colloquium

Dr. Donald Hammill, a special education professor from Temple University, will be in Columbia Thursday, April 20 for a colloquium and a lecture on children with learning disabilities.

The colloquium, sponsored by USC's Psychology Department, will be at 4 p.m. in Barnwell College, room 405.

Dr. Hammill will discuss his recent research on children with specific learning disabilities or children with average or above average intelligence who have learning problems in school.

Thursday's lecture is at 7:30 p.m. at the Forum of the William S. Hall Psychiatric Institute and is sponsored by the S. C. Association for Children With Learning Disabilities. The topic is "Parent Power and the Child With Specific Learning Disabilities." The lecture is open to the public and will include a question-answer period.

Dr. Hammill is co-author of the book "Methods for Learning Disorders," a college text for courses on specific learning disabilities.

This film looks at loneliness very deeply, loneliness that approaches desolation. If you have ever thought you were lonely, see the "Last Picture Show" and you may find out how shallow your own loneliness is.
