

'Catch-22'

Heller's novel becomes theatre group's production

For those who support the arts and enjoy good plays, but are too poor or without transportation to see Columbia productions, the Gamecock Workshop Theater has answered your prayers.

Today and Friday the student group will perform free Joseph Heller's Cleiver's Trial in The Golden Spur beginning at 12:30 p.m. each day.

Also April 24 and 25 the group will perform the play on the Russell House Patio.

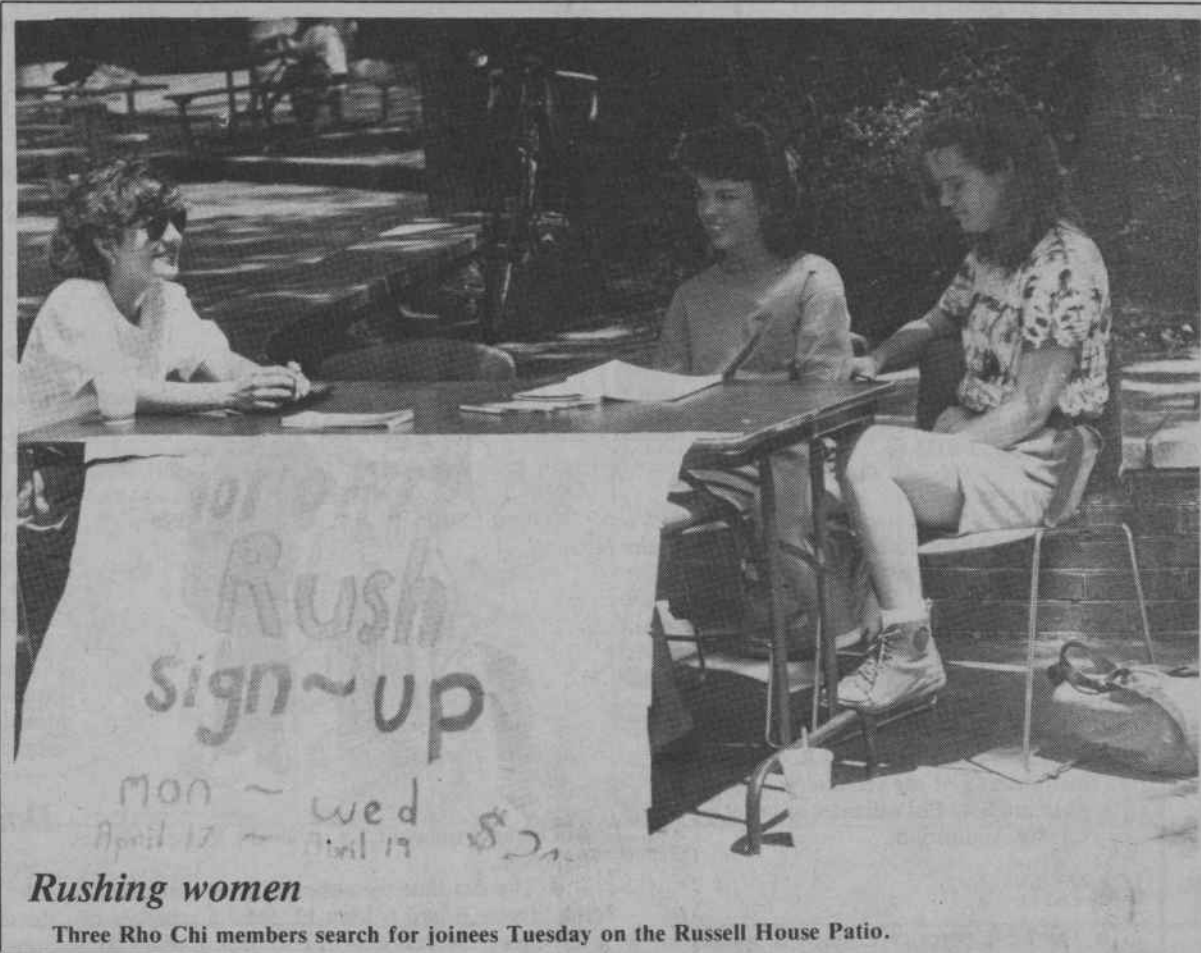

The play is derived from Heller's acclaimed novel Catch-22, which is about a gunnery captain in the Army-Air Force trying to fight insanity during World War II.

The cast is:
 CLEIVINGER Jake Roberts
 YOSSARIAN Freeman Burgess
 SCHEISSKOPF Brad Willis
 COLONEL Brian Hurrel
 METCALF Hunter Boyle
 POPINJAY Erick Hill

The show is directed by Dawn Horne. The Workshop Theater was founded in early January 1988 to give undergraduate students a chance to act in and help with theater productions in addition to regular Mainstage and lab productions.

The difference between this theater group and the others is that most performances are outdoor shows and only undergraduate students can participate.

For those interested in joining the group, contact Jose Rivera, president, at 777-5381.
