

Coaches receive probation, time

By D.R. Haynes

Three former USC coaches were sentenced Aug. 10 for their involvement in supplying steroids to players. The sentences ranged from three to six months probation to three years probation.

Tom Kurucz, Jim Washburn and Keith Kephart all pleaded guilty to the charges before U.S. District Judge G. Ross Anderson on June 1.

Kurucz, 42, was sentenced to serve six months in a community facility and three years probation. Kurucz received the minimum sentence under federal guidelines. He faced up to six years in prison and a stiff $350,000 fine.

Kurucz, a USC coach from 1982 to 1986, was found guilty of lying to a grand jury and a misdemeanor count of dispensing steroids.

Kephart and Washburn faced one year in prison and a $1,000 fine for importing steroids through the mail without a prescription. Both, however, received three months in a halfway house and three years probation.

John Carter, an assistant coach from 1982 to 1986, pleaded guilty to giving steroids to former USC player Tommy Chaikin. Carter faced a maximum penalty of two years in prison and $200,000 in fines. Carter was sentenced three months in the halfway house and three months probation.

Chaikin, who played for South Carolina from 1983-1987, said he and other players used steroids and about half the 1986 team used the muscle-building drug.

Chaikin's story in the Oct. 24 issue of Sports Illustrated, charging widespread steroid use among USC football players, prompted a five-month grand jury investigation that resulted in indictments of four former coaches.

Chaikin and former players Woody Myers, David Poinsett and George Hyder, among others, received immunity from federal prosecution.

Tom Gadd, also an assistant coach for USC from 1982-1986, was charged with importing steroids and encouraging players to use them. A federal jury found Gadd innocent of the charges on June 21.

In handing down the sentences, Anderson said he took into account that none of the coaches had previous criminal records and all expressed remorse for their actions.

Regulations at halfway houses vary, but generally inmates are released each morning to go to jobs or to seek employment. They must report to the facility each evening at a specified time and spend the night there.

TECH MAJORS

3.3 = $30,000

A grade point average of 3.3 could mean as much as $30,000 to you before you graduate. The Navy Nuclear Engineering Program pays qualified juniors and seniors as much as $1,200 a month plus bonuses, while you're still in school, and you don't even have to wear a uniform or attend a drill.

You'll start with a $4,000 bonus as soon as you enter the program. After you graduate you'll be commissioned a Navy officer and sent to a 6-month postgraduate level engineering course in Orlando, Florida, followed by 6 months of hands-on training at a nuclear reactor trainer. And you'll be getting paid as a Navy officer.

To enter this Navy Nuclear Engineering Program you must meet the following requirements:

- United States citizen.
- At least a junior majoring in engineering, math, physics or chemistry.
- Minimum 3.0 GPA.
- Have completed one year of calculus and calculus-based physics.
- No more than 26½ years old at time of commissioning.
- Meet Navy's physical standards.
