

Celebration of Mozart chamber concert theme

By KATHY HEBERGER
Carolina Life Editor

Mozart, Mozart and more Mozart will be featured Tuesday night at the USC Chamber Orchestra's performance at the Koger Center for the Arts.

The performance commemorates the composer, who began his triumphs in music as a child and eventually wrote about 140 symphonies. This year is the bicentennial celebration of his death.

"You have to love Mozart. It's very evident in these pieces why we like Mozart so much. I think students should try to come because they'll enjoy it," assistant conductor John Ricarte said.

The concert will begin with Mozart's motet "Exultate Jubilate" with soprano Laury Christie, who is a voice professor. The piece is in Latin, but there will be an English translation in the program.

"I like the last verse because there's only one word in it — hallelujah," Christie said.

The second piece will be "Symphony No. 33." Both these pieces will include bassonists and brass players from the USC Symphony Orchestra.

The final piece of the concert will be "Sinfonia Concertante," a concerto for violin and viola. Conductor Donald Portnoy will perform the violin part, and viola professor Frits DeJonge will perform the viola part.

The USC Chamber Orchestra concert will begin at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Koger Center. Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students.

USC students strut their stuff

Fashion show hits campus

Whether you're looking for casual clothes, dressy attire, clothes for your favorite sport or that perfect swimsuit, you can get an idea of what's "in" this spring at USC's second fashion show.

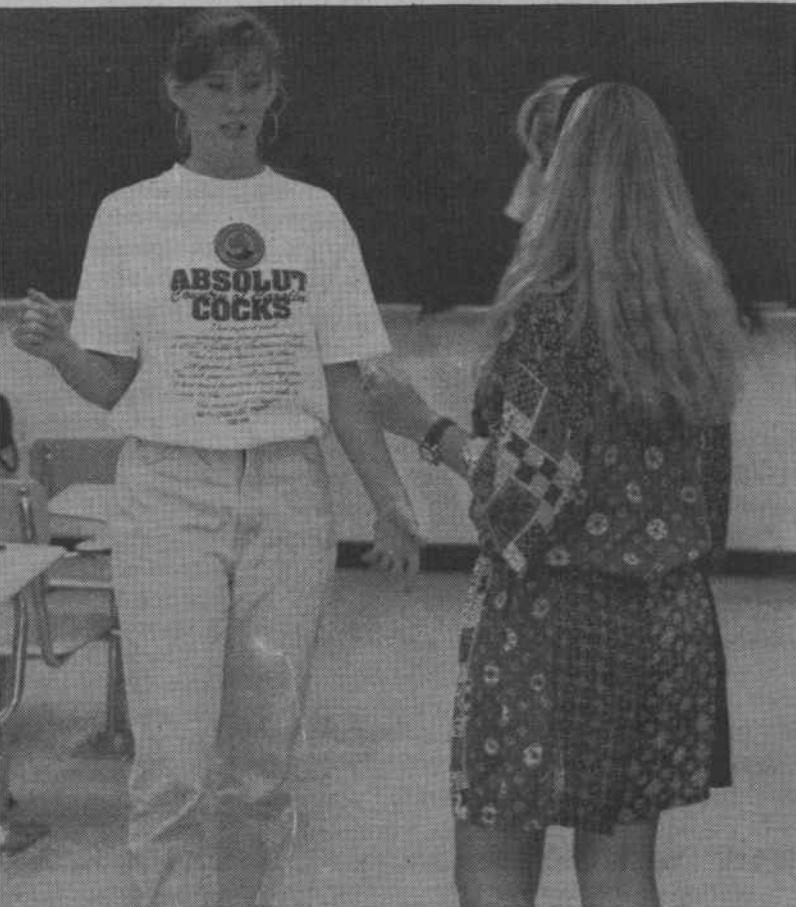

The residence hall governments of Laborde and Burney are sponsoring a fashion extravaganza in Russell House Ballroom Tuesday night at 9 p.m. as a fundraising event for their dorms.

About 50 USC students will be modeling the latest fashions from six local stores. Included in the lineup are business suits from Kuppenheimers, men and women's swimwear from Frantic Atlantic, cycling attire from the Cycle Center, rugged outdoor wear from Adventure Carolina, casual attire from Tapp's and contemporary clothing and lingerie from Look Clothing.

Organizing the event are junior Chris Desanty, senator of Laborde's government and sophomore Tara Evans, president of Burney. The money raised will go to programs and social events sponsored by their respective dorms.

Desanty calls the show "Hollywood at USC." "Everyone has a chance to be a star," he said. "The models get their one time in the spotlight. It's a big adrenalin rush."

The fashion show, Desanty said, is one of the biggest programs on campus. He said he gets a "feeling of satisfaction" for being able to put together such a big program. Desanty also organized this past semester's fashion show, which was a huge success with over 100 people turning out.

These freshmen will be among the 50 students modeling in tomorrow's fashion show at the Russell House.

While at USC, Desanty has helped organize four programs. "What I like to stress out of programs is friendship," he said. "Everyone works together as a team. It's fun but serious at the same time."

Desanty said he hopes everyone comes out to the fashion show because "it's one hell of a program." Students have organized the show and are modeling the clothes, but he said the show will be very professional.

"When they get on stage," he said, "it's like they've been modeling for years. Just don't think it will be less of a program."

The music for the program has been put together by the students. The emcee for the evening is Jennifer Dunkin from the Millie Lewis Modeling Agency.

And for those students who want more than a look at what's fashionable, there will be a raffle for promotional gifts and discounts from the participating stores.

Tickets are $2 for students and $3 for non-students. They can be purchased on Russell House Patio today from noon until 4 p.m. or at the door before the show.
