Who cannot read?
• Twenty-three million American adults -- about 1 in 5 -- cannot read a medicine bottle, a menu or street signs; fill out a job application; write a check; or make correct change for a $20 bill.

The cost is tremendous.
• Illiteracy costs our country $225 billion a year in lost productivity; unemployment and welfare cost taxpayers $5 billion annually.

Illiteracy is a solvable problem.
• With 35 to 45 hours of tutoring, adults can improve their reading skills by one grade level.

All you need is time.
• A literacy program provides adults with all the training, materials and support they need.

If you know someone who needs help learning the basic skills of reading, writing and mathematics, or if you want to help someone learn these skills, call toll free:
