HOTSPOTS

Campus layout perfect for sun days

It's that time of year again, and students across campus are reaching deep into the recesses of their drawers in search of their bathing suits.

Yes, the tanning season has arrived and is now in full force at USC. Students in their pale glory are seeking the perfect tan. But the secret is, where are the best spots to go?

There are numerous hotspots scattered across campus. The roofs of dormitories such as the Towers, Columbia Hall, Maxcy, McClintock and Patterson draw in plenty of students living on campus.

Journalism sophomore Anna Stevens enjoys laying out on the top of Columbia Hall when she can find the time.

"I like going to Columbia Hall," she said. "Since I live in Capstone, I don't have to go very far to lay out. I also like that it is not usually crowded."

Another option for students seeking campus spots is the Horseshoe and the beaches in front of Thomas Cooper Library. Basically, the rule of thumb for campus tanning spots is, "Wherever there is sun and open space is usually a good spot to lay out."

If you're not up to laying out on campus because you spend too much time here already, there are other places such as Finlay Park, Waterworks and the rapids by Riverbanks Zoo.

The rapids, also known as the rocks, is probably one of the most popular off-campus tanning hotspots. There, students can go swimming, fishing, kayaking and hiking. This gives restless tanners an opportunity to keep themselves occupied while soaking up the rays.

"I like going to the rapids because it is more secluded than places on campus," business/marketing sophomore Heather Pendleton said.

So, now that you know all of the best spots to go, grab your tanning lotion, a towel, a few friends and some good music.
