All right everyone say... "beer" or "cheese." Pub Crawl participants ham it up for the camera.

Five Points Fall Crawl comes to Columbia this weekend

The second Five Points Pub Crawl comes to Columbia Saturday with its sights set on raising food for the South Carolina Committee Against Hunger, while offering its participants a fun day and night on the town.

Imagine... helping the needy by drinking loads of beer for the better part of a Saturday afternoon. Short of heaven, chances like this probably don't come around too often. However, this Saturday, the Five Points Fall Crawl will present such an opportunity.

The Fall Crawl, sponsored by Rock 93.5, Zipsheet, Budweiser and Lindy Promotions, Inc., will help the South Carolina Committee Against Hunger collect canned food while also offering a good time and great beer prices to all participants, said Dave Lindenauer, President of Lindy Promotions.

Starting with a registration period from 3-6 PM Saturday afternoon at Elbow Room, the Crawl ends up at Pug's for a party which lasts until 11 p.m. 'crawlers' will register by paying $5 and two cans of food or $8 without a food donation, said Lindenauer.

Upon registering, the 'crawlers' get a plastic wristband, a 16 ounce plastic cup and a map to the participating bars, which include Yesterday's, Village Idiot, Salty Nut Cafe, Night Works, Rough Draft, Jungle Jim's, Garrett's, Monterey Jack's, Elbow Room and Pug's. These bars will offer $1 Bud and Bud Light draft beers to 'crawlers' until 9 PM, when the several different colored maps will be handed out, each with a different route of the bars on it, said Lindenauer.

"This will spread people around so that all bars are doing nice, even business and so that people don't have to wait to get drinks," Lindenauer said.

"The Crawl is an event where students and young professionals can come together for a day of fun while helping the less than fortunate," Lindenauer said. "It's pretty much a win-win situation; we make money on the entrance fee, bars make money on business, charities get food, and advertisers get exposure."

The Crawl, which Lindenauer and several classmates created four years ago as a class project while at American University in Washington, D.C., was an instant success, attracting 1,700 people and collecting 4,000 pounds of food for local charities, said Lindenauer.

From there, it has spread to such areas as New York City, Chicago, Cleveland, Atlanta and Columbia, raising almost 250,000 pounds of food nationally, said Lindenauer. The first Crawl in Columbia, which occurred last spring, turned out well, so expectations are high for Saturday's Crawl, said Lindenauer. "This is the first fall we're doing in Five Points we had a pretty good turnout with 450 people (last spring)," Lindenauer said. "We're hoping for between 750-1,000 people for this Saturday and we expect to raise 2,000 pounds of food." For further information, prospective crawlers can call Lindy Promotions at 1-800-42-CRAWL. Happy crawling!

Polvo has been around for about five years with many seven inches and two albums under their belts. This is the first we've heard from them since last year's "celebrate the new dark age" double seven inch. Polvo's music is comprised of alternate tunings akin to Sonic Youth, awkward tempo changes with lots of false stops and slightly buried yet very melodic vocals. This e.p. shows the band further perfecting their experimentation with odd time changes and eerie melodies. The guitar work is unbelievable.

Madonna gives you something to remember

Something To Remember Madonna ★ ★ ★ (out of four stars)

Madonna is one of if not the, most successful female artists in the history of music, yet she is seen as nothing more than a mindless bimbo who is good at nothing but promoting and marketing herself.

Madonna's latest album, "Something To Remember" is a collection of her greatest ballads. For the first time in her tumultuous career Madonna's critics, and the listening public at large, are forced to pay attention to her music, not to her sexual persona or some controversy surrounding her personal life.

The album contains three new songs, "You'll See," "One More Chance" and "I Want You," which is also featured on the Marvin Gaye tribute album, "Inner City Blues." "Something To Remember" also features such Madonna classics as "Crazy For You" and "Live To Tell," along with recent number ones like "Take A Bow" and "This Used To Be My Playground."

"Something To Remember" is a bold step considering Madonna is known more for her dance music. In fact, her first album, 1982's "Madonna," contained no ballads at all, it was completely made up of the synth-pop club grooves that dominated the early eighties music scene. The album spawned "Lucky Star,"

"Boderline" and "Holiday," three Madonna classics still being played on radio stations today.

Madonna's 1984 follow-up, "Like A Virgin" solidified her status as a pop diva and superstar. The title track "Like A Virgin" was famous for its double entendre, and hidden meanings which have been Madonna's signature ever since.

In 1986 Madonna got serious with "True Blue" which she dedicated to her then husband Sean Penn. She was both praised and berated for tackling the unpleasant topic of teenage pregnancy and abortion through "Papa Don't Preach." Madonna also upset the faint of heart with the video for "Open Your Heart" where she paraded around a strip club dressed in only a black bustier with pointy gold nipples. Unfortunately, the masses missed the point of the video, which was innocence versus decadence, and in the end, innocence wins.

Following 1987's "Who's That Girl" Tour Madonna released "You Can Dance," a collection of dance remixes. The album featured one new track called "Spotlight" along with extended mixes of her previous hits, including "Everybody," "Where's The Party" and "Into The Groove."

In 1989, Madonna released "Like A Prayer" her most personal work to date. The album featured "Till Death Do Us Part" about her marriage to Sean Penn, "Promise To Try" about her mother's death, and "Keep It Together" about the good and bad times she had with her family. Once again, her good intentions were overshadowed by the controversy surrounding the videos for "Like A Prayer" and "Express Yourself."

Madonna could not escape controversy in 1990, due largely to her "Blond Ambition" Tour which was banned in Italy. On top of that, she was almost arrested in Toronto for lewd conduct (i.e. simulating masturbation during her performance of "Like A Virgin"). She also starred in "Dick Tracey" and released the soundtrack album "I'm Breathless." The album featured the number one hit "Vogue" which brought the dance style out of the underground gay clubs, and into the mainstream for a mass audience to enjoy. The year ended with "The Immaculate Collection" Madonna's greatest hits, plus two new songs: "Rescue Me" and "Justify My Love." Even these the video for "Justify My Love" and banned from MTV, the single still it to number one on the charts.

Madonna was accused of finally our too far in 1992 when she released a six photo-fantasy book "Sex" and a companion album "Erotica." The aid contained only a few sexually explicit tracks, most notably "Where Life Begins" Madonna's ode to oral sex. "Erotica" featured socially conscious music, as in "Why's It So Hard" about accept in those who are different, and "In This Life" about two of her friends who died of AIDS.

In 1994, Madonna did the unexpected when she released "Bedtime Story" an R and B oriented album with a mood subtle approach than her previous work. The album was highlighted by "Secret Garden of Love" and "Human Nature" Madonna's no-holds barred attack on her critics.

Madonna's critics are usually wowed who are jealous of her and men who threatened by her, so their attacks normally based on her public image her work. If Madonna's success based solely on her cleavage, or marketing ability, she would not have lasted in the fickle music industry thirteen years.

Culkin kids and parents are at it yet again . . .

LOS ANGELES—For years, as Jerry Lewis achieved success in the movies and on TV, his father would say, "It ain't Broadway."
Thirteen years after his father's death, Lewis says he can finally feel the old man's spirit saying, "Now you've got it, kid."
The comic starred recently as the devil in a Broadway revival of "Damn Yankees."
The production is now going on tour in what Lewis calls the "cherry on the cake."
"What man with my body of work has been given the gift of putting the cherry on the cake?" asked the 69-year-old Lewis, who began performing at 5.

LOS ANGELES — Quincy Jones says he's trying to spend more time with his seven children after letting his career dominate his life for three decades.
"As I got older, I realized that being a great father is not just providing a roof over the children's heads," the 62-year-old Grammy-winning producer and composer told TV's "Extra" in an interview airing this weekend.
"At the time you don't realize it because you think you're doing everything else right. You think, 'They're healthy, they're dressing OK.'"
Jones has seven children by three ex-wives and a girlfriend.

NEW YORK — A lawyer for "Home Alone" star Macaulay Culkin and five of his brothers and sisters wants a judge to close the courtroom where the children's custody will be decided.
"The intimate details of these children's lives will be spread across the tabloids," attorney Robert Stephan Cohen said.
Carolyn Foley, representing The Associated Press in an effort to keep the case open, told state Supreme Court Justice David Saxe "the cat is out of the bag" about the custody fight, which goes to court Monday.
The judge made no immediate decision.
Cohen read a handwritten note from 13-year-old Kieran Culkin, Macaulay's younger brother, pleading with the judge to "spare my family any further embarrassment by way of the press."

Christopher "Kit" Culkin, 50, and Patricia Brentrup, 41, lived together 20 years and had seven children, ages 6 to 19.
In June, Brentrup filed for custody of six of them, excluding the oldest, Shane, because of his age.
Since the split each parent has publicly challenged the other's fitness to care for the children.
DENVER — Rush Limbaugh has pronounced Rep. Pat Schroeder's retirement an early Christmas gift.
"Christmas is indeed early, ladies and gentlemen," he said in a broadcast aired Wednesday after the liberal Democrat announced she won't run in 1996.

Schroeder, in her 12th House term, told radio station KOA that Limbaugh hadn't seen the last of her: "I'm alive and well, and I'm willing to take that big bag of air on anywhere."
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A lawyer who lost his license to practice got 30 days in jail for soliciting money to drop a sex charge against Oprah Winfrey's father.
"Greed is the only reason that I can conclude that he did this," Circuit Judge Bobby Capers said Wednesday in sentencing Frank Thompson-McLeod, who pleaded guilty in August.

Thompson-McLeod was arrested on March 31 and accused of soliciting $300,000 from Vernon Winfrey's 14-year-old daughter to drop an indecent-exposure charge by Thompson-McLeod's client, a student Pamela Kennedy.
Thompson-McLeod, 41, claimed he was just "puffing" when he testified to prosecutors, who were posing as lawyers for Ms. Winfrey, that a large cash payment "could take care of everything."
Prosecutors dropped the indecent-exposure charge against Vernon Winfrey on March 29. Ms. Winfrey has said her father, saying he's "one of the most honorable men I know."
