

Acting up

Other members of the Puppet Regime will perform Boys Life, written by Howard Korder and directed by Brian Riley, July 17-21. Another production, Doggs Hamlet/Cahoots Macbeth, by Tom Stoppard and directed by Jayce Tromsness will be performed July 31-Aug. 4.

"Our goal is to give students the opportunity to experience all aspects of the theater. This is done by using as many student actors, directors, crew, designers and managers as possible in the productions. The Puppet Regime is designed to compliment the local Columbia theaters by sponsoring productions of plays that would not otherwise be seen in town" -Nate Terracio, member
