

U2 takes USC to the Zoo

J.T. WAGENHEIM

Sept. 25, 1992—U2 brought its visually supercharged Zoo TV tour to Williams-Brice Stadium Wednesday night in front of about 30,000 rain-soaked fans.

At about 9 p.m., a computer-enhanced image of President George Bush addressed the concert-goers on three massive television monitors, telling them, "We will, we will rock you." Soon after, Zoo TV came on, and the stadium wasn't the same.

Richland County Sheriff Allen Sloan said everything went smoothly and there was minimal disturbance. "It was a piece of cake," he said.

Law enforcement officials reported about 27 people were arrested for charges ranging from underage drinking to possession of marijuana.

This total included arrests made by the ABC, the highway department, SLED, the sheriff's department and the USC police, Sloan said.

"On a scale of one to 10, I would give this a .05," Sloan said.

He said about 60 sheriff's deputies were working the Labor Day Guns N' Roses/Metallica event. Only 15 were on duty for Wednesday night's concert, he said.

Wendy Oglesby, director of marketing at the Carolina Coliseum, said the concert goers were much more "laid back" than the ones at GNR/Metallica.

"This was a smaller crowd, and they seemed less enthusiastic and emotional than at the Metallica concert," she said. "It is a different sort of crowd."

"The crowd appeared to have really enjoyed the concert. It went as good as it could go."

Sloan said nothing could compare to Guns N' Roses. "This band [U2] doesn't have the reputation that Guns N' Roses has. The fans don't overturn police cars and riot," Sloan said.

"Whenever you have a big group of people, there is always going to be a group who act up and cause trouble, no matter what the event."

At USC football games, about 12 or 13 arrests are usually made, Sloan said.

George Rice, a spokesman for Richland County Emergency Medical Services, said things at the concert went very well. EMS treated 16 people, and four of those were transported to area hospitals for medical complaints.

Rice said 12 EMS technicians were at the concert to give immediate medical attention. Rice also said this event was much easier than the GNR concert, where EMS treated more than 100 people.

Oglesby said the concert goers were an "older crowd," and this may be why things were easier for medical and law officials.

"It's a different personality profile," she said.

Mitzi's advice? Come off it!

June 21, 1973

Dear Mitzi Vivaldi:

I am a P.E. major at the University of South Carolina. I am 21 and mature, but there's one thing I can't figure out. Every time I shower with the rest of the guys in my P.E. class, they stare at me and give me funny looks. Some even try to touch me. It's driving me up the wall, Mitzi, and I don't know what to do. Can you help? Betty prove to be a profitable hobby. Mitzi

Dear Mitzi Vivaldi:

I feel left out of my group at school. Everyone else in the group has syphilis, and I only have gonorrhea. Is there anything I can do? No Applause.

Dear Betty:

Try the other shower room. You know, the one with all the girls in it. If things are still out of whack, choose whichever shower room you like, relax and have a good time. It may

Dear No:

A woman is just a woman, but a frog is a friend forever. Mitzi

Dear Mitzi Vivaldi:

When you are shacking up with a girl, is it considered in poor taste to wear maroon undershorts when she is wearing a charetreuse negligee to bed when the bed has yellow sheets on it? Peter

Dear Peter: Aw, come off it.

Dear Mitzi Vivaldi:

All I wanted was a simple "yes" or "no," you old bat. Peter

Look, sonny, I'm an old lady. You can't call me that and get away with it, especially living like you do.

CONFIDENTIAL TO R.J.—As far as I know, there is no documentable proof or support to the rumor that Mick Jagger ever wore a bush jacket. Mitzi.

Football players boogie to the beat

TRACY MIXSON

Aug. 12, 1986—The music, loud and upbeat, can be heard pounding through the wall of the gym next door. Class is in session in gym 307 of USC's Blatt Physical Education Center, and inside, students shuffle and shake to the tunes of Patti Labelle and the Pointer Sisters.

Not much is unusual about this particular Summer II course, except maybe that most of the students are men—very big men. They're the members of USC's football team, and the class is Physical Education 107, otherwise known as aerobic dance.

The Gamecocks have been taking the course the past three summers as a get-in-shape preview to their grueling, twice-a-day preseason practices, which begin Friday. Bonnie Miller, who has taught the course since its inception, said aerobic dance can help players improve both flexibility and agility.

"Out of the hour, we spend at least 25 minutes just stretching," she said. "Hopefully, they see an increase in flexibility. Also, they get aerobic training and we do choreographed steps that require somewhat fast footwork—much moreso than a lot of aerobic exercise classes. So ideally, they also see some changes in agility."

Nose guard Roy Hart, a starter in 1984 who is coming off a knee injury that sidelined him last year, said the class has helped him re-adjust to physical activity.

"It really stretches you out and gets your muscles in shape for the season," he said. "It especially gets you ready for two-a-days because those practices are really intense."

"The aerobics help prepare you for that because the class is geared to help your flexibility and coordination, which is something you definitely need in football."

Although the class is not designed for the football team, Miller said the athletes tend to perform better than non-players.

"There are other students in the class, but I think that, being athletes, the football players tend to be better coordinated," she said. "They seem to pick up the steps more quickly."

After several songs and countless dance steps in the class, a few players begin to show fatigue. Tackle Brendan McCormack slowly bounces and skips to the music as he moves toward the bleachers, then dumps his 6-6, 268-pound frame against the metal seats.

McCormack and several fellow teammates take a few moments to rest against the bleachers, but it's not long before Miller orders them back to the court to finish the set.

At 5-3 and 125 pounds, Miller's size doesn't exactly command respect from men used to hurling their bodies into human brick walls. But she said she's never had a problem with the players because when the class begins, they know who's the boss.

"The players have always been great, but I can remember when I was petrified the first year I taught the class," she said, adding that one player in particular, 6-4, 273-pound tackle Fitzgerald Davis, intimidated her with his size.

"He never smiled one time, and I was scared the death of him," she said. "Then one day at the end of a class, I said something funny to him, and he turned to me and just beamed and laughed."

"After that, I knew that these guys were just human and that they could be a lot of fun."
