Students get awards for leadership, service

by Clayton Kale
Assistant News Editor

The 1999 Leadership and Service Awards were given out Wednesday afternoon in the Russell House Ballroom.

The awards recognized students for outstanding leadership on campus and in the Carolina community.

Freshman Mark Hartney received the Outstanding New Student Leader Award. The award recognizes first-year students who have become active in the campus community.

The Division of Student and Alumni Services often relies on a core group of organizations to host special events and be the liaison between the administration and the students.

This core group of organizations is called the Hall of Leaders.

The 1999 inductees to the Hall of Leaders are Rico Reed from Association of African-American Students, Allison Freeman from Garnet & Black Magazine, Debbie Hames from the Sorority Council, Matt Goddard from the Fraternity Council, Stephanie Cochran from Community Service Programs, Sara Ladenheim from The Gamecock, Jason Paddock from WUSC-FM, Kim Dickerson from Student Government Association, Kim Coxie from Student Alumni Association, Ben Muldrow from Carolina Productions, Paul Biery from Sports Clubs and Charlie Holley from Residence Hall Association.

The Caroliniana Award recognizes students who have worked hard for organizations that benefit the Carolina community.

The names of the Caroliniana Award recipients will be engraved on a plaque in the Russell House.

The 1999 recipients of the Caroliniana Award are Ainsley Earhardt, Alison Marie Elko, Robert Gioielli, Simon Herrmann, Faith Michelle Jackson, Elisabeth Mack, Mario Ona, John Sageser, Jonathan Sharpe, Adam Snyder, Jennifer Stanley and Chappell Suber.

The Community Service Outstanding Group Awards recognizes organizations that perform the greatest number of community service hours for their group classification.

The winner of the 1999 Community Service Outstanding Group Award for sororities is Alpha Chi Omega.

The winner for fraternities is Alpha Phi Alpha.

The residence hall that completed most hours of community service is Columbia Hall. The Scuba Club logged the most number of community service hours for the sports clubs.

The Partnership Among Lutherans and Methodists completed the most number of community service hours for religious student organizations.

The University Ambassadors won the award for student organizations. The Graduate Student Organization that won the community service award was Women in Law.

The English Programs for Internationals picked up the award for USC academic department.

Geography professor Kirstin Dow and education professor Kevin Swick won the Faculty Service-Learning Award for integrating community service into academic study.

"Service-learning serves the community while enhancing people's education. Also, it shows how important education is," Dow said.

The Rosemary Broadway Memorial Award and Scholarship awards a student who is actively involved in leadership and community service.

Public health graduate student Michelle Alford received the award and a $250 scholarship.

Alford said she coordinated a group to participate in the River Sweep project.

Alford said that she was "thrilled" that she won but that she "felt that everyone involved [with River Sweep] deserved the award."

Every year, three students and one faculty member are chosen for their outstanding contributions to the Carolina community.

The 1999 student volunteer winners are Kathy Van Nostrand, Melissa Morgan and Brooke Bryenton.

The faculty volunteer winner is Marilyn Chassie, associate professor in the College of Nursing.

Scholarship available for therapy students

AMBUCS, a national service organization dedicated to creating independence for people with disabilities, is offering scholarships to juniors, seniors and graduate students who are enrolled in physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech language pathology or hearing audiology. Awards range from $500 to $1,500 annually. Paper applications are not accepted. Students must apply online at www.fastweb.com by April 15. Applicants may use the computer in the Fellowships Resource Room, Harper 108.

Workshops to be held

A series of workshops to help identify, recruit and train students for prestigious scholarships such as the Rhodes, Marshall, Goldwater and Fulbright will be held throughout early April. To learn about the requirements and application process for the following awards, attend one of the following workshops. The Rhodes/Marshall Scholarship Workshop will be at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the Gressette Room in Harper College. Peter Sederberg is the Rhodes faculty adviser, and Gordon Smith is the Marshall faculty adviser. The Goldwater Scholarship Workshop will be at 3:30 p.m. April 13 in the Harper College student lounge. Doug Meade is the Goldwater faculty adviser. The Fulbright Grant Workshop will be at 3:30 p.m. April 14 in the Gressette Room. Bill Matalene is the Fulbright faculty adviser.

Scholarship available for ALD members

Initiated members of Alpha Lambda Delta who have maintained a GPA of 3.5 through the first semester of their sophomore year might be eligible for the Jo Anne Trow Scholarship worth $1,000. Selection will be based on academic record, recommendations, the applicant's statements and campus and community activities. Contact Harrison Greenlaw, Orientation and Testing, at 777-2780, or Novella Beskid, Fellowships, at 777-0958. The application deadline is May 1.

Journalism internships available

The Greenville Ad Club established a memorial fund in the name of Bill Leslie, founder of Leslie Advertising in Greenville. The Bill Leslie Scholarship will award one college student with $2,000 and a summer internship. To apply for the Bill Leslie Scholarship, students must be a rising senior, be an S.C. resident, major in advertising, communications, journalism, marketing or media arts/production, and must maintain a 2.5 GPA.
