J-school names interim dean

BY MACKENZIE CLEMENTS

The College of Journalism and Mass Communications has named a new dean — at least temporarily.

Henry Price, a longtime professor at the college, will take over as interim dean on Aug. 16 after Ron Farrar, who's served as interim dean for the past two years, retires.

Price joined USC's faculty in 1969. Since then, he has taught copy editing and public opinion and propaganda courses. He has also served as chairman of faculty senate, chairman of the college's print sequence and associate dean for academics and undergraduate studies.

Price's appointment is for one year or until the college selects a permanent dean.

Since Dean Judy VanSlyke Turk left the position two years ago, the college has been conducting a national search for a replacement.

But with budget cuts looming in the background, the search has been unsuccessful.

"It came to be a necessity when the dean search didn't work," Price said. "Without a new dean ... they had to do another interim situation."

Though accepting the position of interim dean won't allow him to serve on the faculty search

Tuition to jump by 10.4%

BY CRISTY INFINGER
THE GAMECOCK

The USC board of trustees finalized plans Friday for a 10.4 percent raise in tuition for all students.

The new tuition will increase in-state tuition by $195 per semester, and out-of-state tuition by $504 per semester, beginning this fall.

Faculty and staff will also feel the sting of the budget cuts; the approved plan includes 9 percent cuts in every department.

With more than 36,500 students at USC's eight campuses around the state, many students and families will be affected by the difference and, with fall semester only a couple of months away, searching for the funds to cover their own financial needs.

Because of state budget cuts, USC isn't the only university facing cuts in programs and increases in tuition. Clemson University increased its in-state tuition by 41.8 percent and out-of-state tuition by 15.3 percent last Wednesday.

With such a large increase, many USC students are thinking less negatively about USC's tuition increases.

At the Friday's board of trustees meeting, Student Government President Corey Ford acknowledged thanked the board for approving a reasonable increase.

"We do appreciate this budget," Ford said at the meeting.

"I definitely don't think that the students are going to be happy with the tuition increase, but given the circumstances that we had in the budget, we were pretty lucky. The university had the option to raise the tuition as much as they wanted to,"
