USC to offer series on health issues

The University of South Carolina School of Medicine will offer its second annual Mini-Medical School, a series of presentations on major health and social issues that impact the health of South Carolinians.

The Mini-Med School, which is free and open to the public, includes sessions from 7 - 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 22, and continuing on consecutive Tuesdays through Nov. 19. To register for one or all sessions, call 733-3200. Programs will be held in the M - II classroom of USC's medical school, located next to the Dorn Veterans Medical Center on Garners Ferry Road.

Two art professors win notable awards

University of South Carolina faculty members Minnette Floyd and Cynthia B. Colbert have earned prestigious awards for art education.

Floyd has been named Most Outstanding Art Educator in Higher Education by the South Carolina Art Education Association, and Colbert has been named a fellow with the National Art Education Association.

Floyd, an assistant art professor who has taught at USC since earning her doctoral degree in art education from Florida State University in 1997, is credited with having a tremendous impact on South Carolina art education. Under her direction, USC's Young Artist's Workshop has grown.

In connection with her specialty in multi-cultural education, Floyd received a Fulbright Award to study in South Africa this past summer.

Last spring, the National Art Education Association's Women's Caucus awarded her the Mary J. Rouse Award for her commitment to and promise in the profession.

Colbert, who has taught at USC since 1980, is the first art professor at USC to receive NAEA's distinction of fellow. It is considered the highest honor given by the NAEA because it recognizes achievement through research, professional leadership, teaching and service in the profession throughout an educator's career. Colbert previously has earned two other NAEA awards, including Most Outstanding Art Educator in Higher Education in 1993 and the June King McFee Award in 1998.

Furman soccer player remembered

GREENVILLE (AP) — Furman University has said goodbye to a soccer player killed in a traffic accident last week, remembering Gary Griffin's dedication and sense of humor.

A memorial service for Philip Gary Griffin was held Wednesday, at the hour Furman should have been heading to Clemson University for a big match.

"Everybody liked him," said Clint Hill, a senior on the Paladins' 14th-ranked soccer team. "He was a leader, as a freshman. Some of the seniors and I were talking about it. The seniors look to lead the freshmen. He came in, and it was almost like he was leading us."

Hundreds of students, including his teammates and the Clemson soccer team, faculty, friends, his grandparents and his parents, Al and Doris Griffin, attended.

Powerball sales top $4 million

COLUMBIA (AP) — Powerball sales at retailers along South Carolina's northern border lead the way, and lottery players statewide spent more than $500,000 a day in the first week of the new multistate, multi-million dollar game.

Lottery players have purchased more than $4.2 million in Powerball tickets since Oct. 5, when the game began in South Carolina and it hasn't taken long for South Carolina to have some big Powerball winners.

A Garden City man won $500,000 while a Charlotte, N.C., woman won $100,000 in the first drawing.

Hodges, Sanford disagree over ads

MYRTLE BEACH (AP) — Gov. Jim Hodges and his Republican challenger Mark Sanford disagree on whether tourism ads promoting in-state travel after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks had a positive effect on state tourism.

Hodges said Wednesday during the gubernatorial candidates' seventh debate that the ads were a good investment. Sanford said Hodges was playing politics with the ads.

The governor said it helped the state attract tourists when many people decided to stay home after the attacks on Washington and New York. The (Charleston) Post and Courier reported.

Noelle Bush gets 10 days jail time

ORLANDO, FLA. (AP) — Gov. Jeb Bush's daughter was sentenced to 10 days in jail and led away in handcuffs Thursday after being accused of having crack cocaine in her shoe while in drug rehab.

Noelle Bush, 25, kissed her aunt Dorothy Koch as a sheriff's deputy cuffed her behind the back. Koch is the sister of President Bush and the governor, who was not in court.

In a statement, the governor said he realizes that his daughter must face the consequences of her actions.

"Every parent of a child with an addiction understands that the long road to recovery is never easy and that there are numerous challenges along the way," he said. "This is a very difficult time for all of us ... and I pray every day our beautiful daughter will once again know a life free from the horrors of substance abuse."

Al-Qaida ready to strike, CIA says

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director George Tenet told lawmakers Thursday that recent attacks overseas suggest that al-Qaida is poised to strike once more against Americans — possibly in the United States.

Following recent terrorist attacks in Kuwait and Indonesia, "you must make the assumption that al-Qaida is in an execution phase and intends to strike us both here and overseas," Tenet said. "That's unambiguous as far as I'm concerned."

Tenet said he was meeting later in the day with Homeland Security Director Tom Ridge. He said Ridge has already taken defensive measures "in specific areas where the intelligence was most credible and in sectors where we're most worried about." He didn't identify them.

Enron trader pleads guilty to wire fraud

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A former Enron trader accused of masterminding a scheme to drive up energy prices during California's power crisis pleaded guilty Thursday to conspiracy and agreed to cooperate with prosecutors.

Timothy Belden, the former head of trading in Enron's Portland, Ore., office, admitted to one count of conspiracy to commit wire fraud. He faces up to five years in prison and must forfeit $2.1 million.

"I did it because I was trying to maximize profit for Enron," Belden told U.S. District Judge Martin Jenkins.

U.S. alters wording to gain support

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Seeking to win a new U.N. resolution on Iraq, the United States has removed language explicitly threatening military action, while making clear Baghdad will face consequences if it fails to cooperate with weapons inspectors, diplomats and U.S. officials said Thursday.

The latest compromise appeared tailored to win support from powerful Security Council members, including France and Russia, which want to give Iraq a chance to cooperate before authorizing force.

A senior White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the proposed resolution wouldn't spell out the consequences but says Iraq's President Saddam Hussein will be in "material breach" if he violates any U.N. resolution.

That term, material breach, allowed for military action to be taken in Kosovo in 1999. The official said that since no measures would be ruled out in the text, the White House believes President Bush would have "maximum flexibility" to mete out consequences should Saddam fail to comply.

Vatican rejects some policies

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has rejected some elements of the U.S. Catholic Church's new sex abuse policy and advised American bishops against going ahead with them, church sources familiar with the response said Thursday.

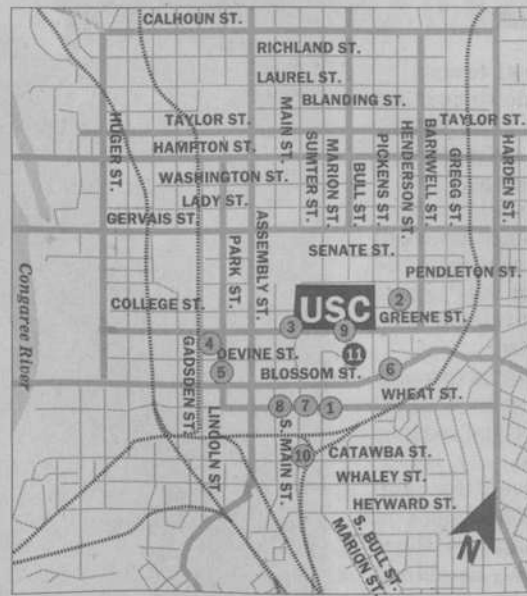

In particular, the Vatican expressed concern over elements of the proposed policy that would violate the individual rights of accused clerics now protected under universal church law, the sources said.

A leading U.S. advocate for abuse victims accused the church of "pretty dangerous backsliding" on its promises to crack down on molesters.

"Bishops now have to choose: Do they keep kids safe or do they make Vatican bureaucrats happy?" said David Clohessy, national director of the Survivors Network of Those Abused by Priests.

The Vatican response, which is short on specifics, will be made public Friday. Bishop Wilton Gregory, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, and other American prelates met Thursday with Pope John Paul II to discuss the clerical abuse scandal that has rocked the American church.
