porary composer Hubert Bird, whose music has been featured in Volvo commercials.

"I participated last year in the program, and it is amazing at the turnout," said Heidi Hobus, who is in her third semester with the choir.

"This performance gives us a chance to prepare and rehearse the program for the public before we take it out on the road," she said.

The sound of the choir is probably not typical music a college student would put in constant rotation in the CD player, but USC students should turn out for this one-time concert. With a beautiful blend of sopranos, altos, tenors and basses, the Concert Choir evokes pleasing harmonies and melodies.

"It would be nice for students to experience different music from what they are used to," said Andrew Fischer, who is in his first semester with the choir.

"We have worked all semester to prepare for this event," said Bahiyih Young, who has been in Concert Choir two semesters.

"We want to invite the campus community, especially," Wyatt said. "Most students are not here long enough to know about the area traditions. I think people will truly enjoy the program."

"What Sweeter Music..." will be performed 6 p.m. Dec. 8 at First Presbyterian Church, at 1324 Marion St. For more information, call the USC Choral Department at 777-5369 or the School of Music at 777-4280.
