Teach Children to Use the Telephone

To children, the telephone operator should be as well known and trusted as the corner policeman. Although a youngster can't be expected to memorize long telephone numbers, he can be taught one rule: If something happens, dial zero, tell the lady what is wrong and she will help you.

"My Mommie's asleep and won't wake up and there's a fire in our house," was one 5-year-old's plaintive message to the operator. After a little prodding, the operator learned the boy's name and address and called the fire department. There was no mistake. Firemen found the house on fire and the mother lying in bed, knocked out by sleeping pills. Both survived, thanks to the child's action.

Another youngster whose mother fell through a floor and was trapped, went directly to the phone and dialed zero. He couldn't remember his daddy's name or where he lived, but he rattled off the name and address of his grandparents in short order. The operator called them, got the child's address and had a doctor on the way in minutes.

Although operators are as ingenious as Sherlock Holmes in tracing calls from small fries, such procedure is a waste of precious time. Encourage your child to memorize his name, his father's name and address.

IMPORTANT!

Each month several copies of The Clothmaker are returned due to incorrect mailing addresses. This is an indication that a number of employees are not receiving other mail that may be of value. Another result is unnecessary expense. From time to time information of interest is mailed from the plants to employees. Returned mail can be eliminated provided each individual reports any change of address at the proper time.

If you should change your present address, have a change in marital status, or change of dependents, you should notify the Personnel Department as soon as possible.

Ge' Ready, Get Set, Pay!

Income Tax Time Coming Soon; Check Deductions Carefully

This year millions of Americans will overpay their Federal income tax bills, according to the Internal Revenue Service, simply because they'll fail to take all the deductions to which they are entitled.

To help you pay the correct amount of your tax bill, here are some tips from the experts on how to shop for bargains in your taxes:

First, list all your deductions according to categories required on the tax form. This includes contributions to charity, interest paid on debts during the year, and other deductible taxes that you've paid to the city, county and state. These deductible expenses add up faster than you might think, so check to see if they exceed 10 per cent of your family's adjusted gross income or $1,000. If so, it will save you money to itemize them on the longer tax form.

Second, study the instructions that come with your tax form carefully. They'll tell you about dozens of proper deductions that never occur to most people. For example, under medical and dental expenses you can deduct for such things as false teeth, eye-glasses and hearing aids. If you see deductions on the tax information that you missed in making out your list, add them to their proper category. Also, cross out any claims on your list that don't qualify as legitimate deductions.

Third, collect all your canceled bank checks and receipts for the year, making sure you have one or the other to back each tax deduction on your list. This is important because you might be asked to justify your tax returns, and it's a lot easier to have the necessary papers to support the deductions in the first place than it is to find yourself tangling with the tax authorities later.

If you have to provide evidence for your claims, checks are recognized as proof of payment in any law court.

Finally, since many tax records can't be replaced, it's a good idea to store them in a safe deposit box. Keep the following items in your box for a period of seven years: bank passbooks (even if the account has been closed); records of medical and dental expenses, contributions, interest payments; and cancelled checks and receipts to prove you've filed a proper return. If you own stock, keep a record of the purchase and the sale of the stock after you've sold it.

Also, it's a good idea to save indefinitely the cancelled checks that show payment of Federal and state taxes as well as copies of your income tax forms for previous years because they provide a running record of your financial progress.
