Wes Littleton Ends Weaving Career

When Wes Littleton retired recently from Plant No. 2 Weaving, he ended a career with the company that has expanded over 46 years.

Wes, as he is known by his many friends, gained the reputation over the years of always being at work well before shift change because "I never liked to be late."

"I've missed very little time from work," he added, "always trying to make every pick I could. That's the only way to make good money," he added with a smile.

Wes recalled the early years with the company when he ran about all the jobs at one time or another. "Some days I didn't know whether I'd be a loom filling supplier, smash specialist, or a weaver."

"I liked my work and that's why I stayed with it. Now that I'm retired, I guess I'll fish and just relax," he continued, "but I'll never forget my association with the 'mills.'"
