FARM CHANGES

FOR BOLL WEEVIL.

Readjustment Requires Careful Planning to Be Safe.

Andrew M. Soule, President Georgia State College of Agriculture. Any system of safe farming, under boll weevil conditions should provide that cultivated area of the farm should be so divided as to grow enough corn to provide for family and the live stock throughout the year. The area will vary with the fertility of the land, but on a two-horse farm not less than ten, or better still, twenty acres of land should be devoted to this crop. Enough land should be devoted to oats and small grains to meet home requirements.

If the oats are properly handled they will provide some grazing. A great variety of hay and forage-producing crops can be grown successfully after oats, but it is important to remember that the cultivation of legumes should be emphasized because of their ability to gather nitrogen from the air.

Certainly, the farmer should provide all the meat needed for his family. There is no reason why two to six brood sows should not be maintained on the average two-horse farm. Grazing crops should be depended on to provide the food needed for the growth and fattening of young pigs. They can be hardened off with a little corn in the fall and a very choice quality of meat obtained.

A small flock of hens will provide all the eggs needed and leave a surplus for sale. Probably no class of meat is in greater demand in towns and cities than chickens.

Every wise farmer will keep at least two cows so that his family will be supplied with an abundance of milk and butter at all seasons of the year. Then if he will keep a couple of brood mares and raise a colt or two each year, he can maintain his work stock on an efficient basis. Next the farmer should provide a garden. A half acre of land will produce all the vegetables which a family of six can possibly eat, and if a proper rotation is established and the garden well fertilized and handled, fresh vegetables may be had at almost any season of the year. There is probably no section which will produce a greater variety of vegetables with greater ease than the southeastern States, and yet the garden is neglected, because its value is not appreciated and its influence on the health of the family not understood.

After having accomplished the foregoing, the farmer should devote a reasonable area of his land to the cultivation of cotton, as his main money crop. If this plan is followed, a system of safe farming will have been established throughout the South.

DON'T BLAME YOUR TOWN

If you want to live in the kind of a town, Like the kind of a town you like, You needn't slip your clothes in a grip And start on a long, long hike. You'll only find what you left behind, For there's nothing that's really new.

It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town. It isn't your town—it's you. Real towns are not made by men afraid Lest somebody etsy ahead. When everyone works and nobody shirks You canraise a town from the dead.

This Simple Laxative A Household Necessity

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin Should Have a Place in Every Home.

Constipation, or inaction of the bowels, a condition that nearly everyone experiences with more or less frequency, is the direct cause of much disease. When the bowels become clogged with refuse from the stomach, foul gases and poisons are generated, and unless the congestion is quickly relieved the system becomes weakened and most susceptible to attack.

Various remedies to relieve constipation are prescribed, but many of these contain cathartic or purgative agents that are harsh and violent in their action and shock the system. The most effective remedy is the combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

The Hon. John D. Keister of Brandywine, W. Va., who has represented his district in the State Legislature for six years, writes that he uses Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and finds it a splendid laxative, easy to take and mild, yet positive, in its action, and that it should be in every household for use when needed.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists in all parts of the United States and costs only fifty cents a bottle. It contains no opiate or narcotic drug, does not gripe, and is recommended as a family laxative, mild enough for the tiniest babe, yet sufficiently powerful to act easily on the strongest constitution. To avoid imitations and ineffective substitutes be sure to get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. See that a facsimile of Dr. Caldwell's signature and his portrait appear on the yellow carton in which the bottle is packed. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 455 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.
