A New Version.

"In Flanders' fields our dear ones lie, (Who taught us how the brave could die)

Where crosses mark the narrow bed, And poppies blowing overhead. There also lie the hearts of those Of us who love, and loving know. The price sublime that we have paid, The sacrifice each of us made In Flanders' fields.

The larks will sing, the poppies blow, And ye, unbroken sleep will know. While we who loved and were loved Will life's desert cross alone, until That glorious day for hearts which bled, The earth gives back to us our dead From Flanders' fields.

Famous Violin Had Been Stored in Spanish Museum For Generations Untouched—To Be Heard Here on Wednesday, May 21, at the Central Graded School.

CROWD GAZING AT SKOVGAARD'S WONDERFUL $13,000.00 VIOLIN

Violins may not have the sentiments and sensibilities attributed to them by imaginative musicians, but they have histories, interesting and varied, gay romances and dark tragedies, even as do their warm friends of mankind. A violin which is not only remarkable in itself, but with a remarkable story is one possessed by Axel Skovgaard, the violinist, who is to appear at the Central Graded school on Wednesday, May 21. It is as bright and polished as if had left the hands of its maker but yesterday, and still the instrument is over 200 years old.

First Person to Play upon the violin was Mr. Skovgaard himself. To a chance meeting with a London dealer in musical instruments Mr. Skovgaard owes his good fortune in obtaining his rare Strad. This man had a fine collection of old Italian violins, they were real antiques, cracked, scratched and worn, through more or less rough life for several centuries. Having revealed in the wealth before him and tried most of them, Mr. Skovgaard remarked that it would have been a pleasure to have seen such instruments when they were new, but such pleasures were denied modern artists. To the surprise of the Danish artist, his new friend replied in the negative and stepped to a fire-proof vault and came out with a big yellow leather case, which he opened and took out

An Old Heirloom which had always been in the family, and that he had once found a book with a history of how Stradivarius made this violin in memory of his dead son, and that they had therefore retained it in the museum." with the instrument went the romantic tale of its origin—how in Cremona, through the love of one of Stradivarius' best pupils for a girl violinist, an instrument that the maker particularly prized had been Stolen For the Girl when it was returned to its maker he refused ever to part with it, and it was not until after his death that his sons sold it to a collector, who, in his turn, sold it to the Spanish museum, where the instrument descended from father to son in many generations. The price demanded for the violin was $13,000 and was paid by Skovgaard. This violin fulfills the most enthusiastic expectations as all will believe who hear its tone.
