If He'll Only Think To Pray. Carrie Elizabeth curran,

- carrie Elizabeth curran,
 Is your train and body weary,
 Is your task so hard to day?
 I am sure it will relieve you
 If you'll only think to pray.
 If just where life seems most dreary,
 And our cross is hard to bear,
 Christ will diff the heavy burden
 It we'll kneel in fervent prayer,
- All the little, vexing trials

- All the little, vexing trials
 That along our padiway lay,
 He will turn to fragrant blossoms,
 If we'll only think to pray,
 Jesus sends as joy and sorrow,
 still, the grief we need not bear;
 He will heal the aching heart,
 Take it all to him in prayer.
 Has He not for every sorrow
 Given us joys an handred fold;
 And when we were weak and faint,
 Did He not our feet uphold?

- Though we oft forget and slight Him Grieve this toyal Priend each day; Yet for us is heart His yearning. Longing just to hear us pray. Then look ever onward, utoward. Though the pach seems dark to-day, Christ will lift our acavy burden If we'll only think to pray.

Practical Christianity.

"It is wonderful how the Lord dees take care of us-wonderful!" and little Mrs. Fransell gave the dress little Mrs. Fransell gave the dress waist on which she was working an emphatic shake by way of offirmation. Why, I was left a widow more than eight years ago, and I can see how He has led me and taken care of me every year and day since."

"I suppose you have done something toward the care-taking yourself?" said Mrs. Lyte, who knew somewhat of the energy pent up in the slight figure of her dressmaker.

"Certainly," said Mrs. Fransell: "I didn't sit down with my hands folded and expect my bread and butter to and expect my bread and butter to come to me; nor did I expect my friends to give it to me. I've worked hard, I tell you; not many idle hours nor much vacation for me in these eight years. But I have lived comfortably, and have given my daughter a good education, and I know I never could have done it if the Lord had not helped me in every way and at every time.

"I am sure you could not have worked so hard and kept as fresh and cheerful without His help," said Mrs.

Lyte.
"O dear, no," said the dressmaker, her deft fingers arranging a graceful fall of lace as she talked; "but do you know there are a good many people, I work for—Christian people, too who laugh at me if I say anything about it? The Lord helping you to sew, Mrs. Fransell; how perfectly ridiculous! they say. But I know He does. When my husband died I knew I should have to take care of myself and my little girl. There wasn't a thing that I knew how to do that would bring me in any money. I hated to sew, and I didn't do it very well, of course. But I made up my mind that that was the thing for me to do, so I set myself to learn how. At first I went out as a seamstress: then I went for a year to a dressmaker just to learn how to put things together, and to do them the best way; then I

"Mrs. Lyte, there was many a time when I was dreadfully discouraged. I have prayed to the Lord often to I have prayed to the Lord often to help me cut a garment right, and make a dress fit well, and I knew He did help me. It is all owing to His help that I have got where I am now, as busy as I can be all the time, and people seem pretty well satisfied with my work. O, yes indeed," she went "that is just my idea of a heavenly Father. He knew I had to work for my living, and He knew I was doing the very best I could, but I couldn't do it all by myself, so according to His promise He supplied my learned to cut and fit.

"Yes," said Mrs. Lyte, "I believe that is all true; it is Bible teaching and it is Christian philosophy. If we could all of us receive the things of God as little children," we would be better and b betterand happier."

Take it to the Lord in prayer, that is my motto for everything," said Mrs. Fransell. "But I was working for a lady a few weeks ago, she is a member of my church, too, and I supposed she was a Christian. Her little boy was naughty and she reproved him very sharply, and they had quite a tussle. Afterward she said to me: 'I am at my wit's end about that boy. H won't mind, and I lose my patience and my temper with him.' I ventured to say to her . 'Don't you ever take it to the Lord in pray r? I should never think of trying to manage a child by my own wits, nor myself either, for that matter '

"No," she said, "I don't think I ever did pray about it especially. I ask God's guidance in a general way, of course." I asked her if she never prayed with her little boy, and she eads. "I have him say him say him say said: 'I hear him say his prayers every night, of course.' That is as much as a great many Christians know about prayei, I'm afraid. And, Mrs. Lyte, I don't often tell my own views or experience about it, for when I do people look at me as if there was something wrong with my head."

"Nevertheless. Mrs. Fransell, you Phoenix. do tell it in your cheerful face and in the conscientious work you do," Mrs. Lyte, "and I suppose that is really the best way to 'Shine with a pure clear light,' you in your little corner, and I in mine."

Inward Peace.

There are persons who school themselves to external composure, maintaining a calm, unruffled exterior amid all the disturbing circumstances of life. The power to do this is frequently a great advantage to its possessor. He controls himself, and he avoids many incautious acts and unpleasant circumstances. But this external calmness may be illusive. There are persons who maintain this aspect of quietude when they have very little true inward Aggregate Vote for Each Ticket rest. They control their feelings for the time, but the tumult and the storm rage within, and they have no rest to

Very different is the condition of those who have the inward peace of God: whose hearts are filled with the deep content, the abiding rest, which is the portion of the soul centered in God, and free from all the tumult and disturbance of a restless and disordered The storm may rage without, but there is peace within. The hurricane may roar, but the soul which has found refuge in Christ and has built upon the Everlasting Rock, knows no ill and fears no danger. There is not merely the appearance of calmness and composure, but the calmness is real, the rest is genuine, the composure is not pretended. It is an inner calm such as the world k nows not, neither can comprehend.

ABBEVILLE'S INDUSTRIES.

SOMETHING OF THE MEN WHO MAKE THE TOWN.

A Hopeful Outlook for this Splendid Merchantile, Banking, Manufac-turing, Educational, Moral and Religious Centre.

There always comes a time in the History of every Nation, State, City or town when "Prog-ress" must be the watchword, or fate the inress" must be the watchword, or fate the inevitable result.

We are proud to write that Abbeville has some time since aroused to her position and thrown aside many things which have impeded her progress heretofore, and that to-day we are moving finely along. Never in the history of our town have we been aroused to the possibilities which lie before us.

We are wide awake on educational interests which we consider the most important of all.

We sre wide awake on educational interests which we consider the most important of all. Strolling up main street many fine and imposing dwellings, lawns and beautiful yards greet the eye; but the greatest sight which greets the eye is a large, magniticent ten thousand dollar ($10,000) brick building, which is the Abbeville high school. A school so much needed and one that will not be excelled by any of its kind in the state. Every one is interested in the school and it is a building and will be a school in standing, that any in South Carolina may covet. Carolina may covet.
Take advantage of the present and send your children; better come and live here and get tuition "free." Next we have two lines of Rairoad which children; better come and live here and get tuition "free."

Next we have two lines of Railroad which give us access to all parts of the country. Charleston now is only a few hours ride, Atlanta is our next door neighbor. New York, Baltimore and points North are now comparitively a few miles distant. Further we are still looking with high hope for the G. O. & N. R. R., shops. Abbeville is the choise of the railroad men, and we are willing to do all we can to have their hopes and ours realized.

We are not asleed, new industries are in view, more buildings to be erected and affairs in general are looking up. To day we have more applicants for dwellings than we can supply, and just here, we would urge that every one who has a good building lot, build a neat little cottage on it, and a renter will not be wanted. A citizen last week had eight applicants for a little cottage he had to rent, and could have rented eight more if he had had them. This looks like business.

A word to men who have capital to invest. Cast your lot among us, build nice little cottages and reap a fine little interest on your money. We have enough "negro" cabins already what we we need is neat inttle cottages.

Turning to the industries of our town we would notice C. P. Harmond & Co's shoe and harness factory. They have also a tanyard in connection with their shoe, harness and leather establishment. They give employment to twenty or twonty five workmen, and are turning out a fine grade of work. The capacity of their shoe nachine is 75 pairs per day but at present they are only turning out 100 pairs per week.

Then there is the oil mill which works a present they are only turning out 100 pairs per week.

Then there is the oil mill which works a great quantity of seed thereby giving a good price for cotton seed.

We have also three large ginneries, the latest improved, which do fine work. Farmers can bring their seed cotton to town and seil overything here, and save the trouble of hanling it several miles. They do fast and good work.

We cannot forget the two fine newspaper plants which gives employment to a hosts of printers, the Press & Banner and Medium. No comment is needed upon these two papers.

Again, we have good brick-yards, coal and wood yards, lumber yards, machine shops, wood shops. However we are not what we wish to be in any of them and persons wishing to come here can by selecting a good line do well.

well.

One thing we have not got yet and sometimes very much needed, "a good hardware store," and especially a good "book store." Let some one establish the above named pressing needs of our town.

Having a host of cotton buyers in the fall Abbeville is a good cotton market and pays tip top prices. Those who have gone to other markets are coming back and they will always find us O. K.

ESTATE OF

Dr. John DeLa Howe.

A T a meeting of Board of Trustees of Estate of DeLa Howe, July 22, 1892, it was resolved to "Petition the next Legislature to grant them authority to sell 1,00° acres of the real estate so that the school may commence at once," and that this resolution be published.

This would still leave between 700 and 800 acres attached to the estate which is ample for all purposes and will retain most of the cleared and arable land.
