Sick Unto Death.

Miss Eliza Cater is extremely ill. With a brave heart and a Christian fortitude she stands on the brink, ready to go at her Master's call.

ter's call. For five years she has lived between hope and doubt as to a fatal result from the malady with which she was then stricken, but through it all, she has been courageous, facing death with an undaunted exterior and remaining at her post of duty-to all out-ward appearances-cheerful and happy, until disease had made such inroads on her health, that she could no longer rise from her bed. Performing her duty faithfully and uncom-plainingly until Saturday, December 31, 1892, she went to her home that evening from the store never to return. She could go no longer, and then lay down mpon the bed from which she has not risen, on which she now lies, waiting for the wast-ing disease to finish its work, and to free her soul from its earthly habitation. The community, and the people who love her so well, remembering ber cheerful, happy disposition, deeply sympathize with the at-flicted household, and their hands have been untiring in efforts to alleviate her sufferings and to gratify the desires of their own hearts by performing offices of kindeess and love for one who was always delighted to give pleasure to others. If there is a subject which we can talk of dispassionately and without prejudice it is the forthcoming contest between Senator Butler and Governor Tillman. The differ-ence between them being: Senator Butler has never strained his vision sufficiently to enable him to see anything as small as the Press and Banner, and Governor Tillman seems to have a rabid hatred for all anti papers. The honors being ensy, and having no intrest one way or the other, and having no ends to subserve, we are indifferent as to the personal preferment of either. These remarks are induced by a Washing-ton correspondent of the newspapers who has taken upon himself to dispute any re-port looking to the appointment of Senator I Butler to a position under the Cleveland ad-iministration, and closing his article with the assortion that he will contest the election with Tillman before the people, and will car-try on the fight to a finish, or words to that effect.

Secret Political Meeting in the Court

House Last Friday Night.

The meeting instea durin solut infunction. The meeting was kept secret from the out-side public. The object of the meeting was stated to be to make a demand through Congressman Lat-imer that all the Presidential post-offices in the County be given to the Alliance Dem-r ocrats, and as far as it was possible for the e meeting to do so, all citizens outside of the Alliance were debarred any chance of getting any office. The lines were strictly drawn, and Alliancemen are supposed be standing where they stood in the recent campaign, demanding everything from Coroner to Governor. Until this meeting, judging from the public utterances of some of the distinguished lead-ers in the "dominant element," we thought there was a disposition to wipe out the fac-tional lines in the Democratic party in South Carolina, and that there was at least a half consent to restore barmony and good feeling between Democrats in this State, but it seems that outsiders are to be considered as aliens and enemies.

with Tillman before the people, and will car-ry on the fight to a finish, or words to that effect. The time was when politicians and news-papers, standing on the heights of official doorsteps in the cities and capitals of this country could control coming events in the political world, but that time heas passed. The people are now in the saddle and are being led by new men who have inspired their followers with the belief that old things should be relegated to the rear. In the race for Senator which will vir-tually come before the people in the next campaign, the contest will be to elect repre-sentatives to the General Assembly who will favor either Tillman or Butler, and whoever goes to the next Legislature will go there pledged for the one or the other candidate. Butler has been in the Senate for nearly twenty years, and in that time he has come verv little in contact with the people. Many of his old friends are gone, and a vast multi-tude of the present voters have come upon the stirring scenes of life since he was sent to Washington. He is, therefore, but little known to a cast majority of our people, and having made no special effort to maintain the friendly and intimate touch of the elbow f with the masses, he will come into the con-test ill prepared for success. On the other hand, Tillman is in power, flushed with recent victory, and in touch with his followers, who seem mad with their hattred of old men and old things. Whatever his record may be as Governor, he will turn it to good effect before the peo-ple. The movement of which he is the head,

That act alone will give his adminis-tration a big advantage. The workings of that plan of selling whiskey will put more money in the treasury at Columbia than all the phosphute beds in the State. It will put into the county and city treasuries enough money to materially lower the State and county taxes, while shutting up the bar rooms.

All these reasons, added to the present ex-alted condition of the public mind, will give Governor Tiliman an overwhelming victory over any man who may enter the race against him for United States Senator. Senator Butler will not be re elected. He needn't base any hope on any such result. For this reason it is barely possible that he had better accept any desirable position that may be offered him at Washington.

The indications are that the farmers are making extensive preparations for large crops this year. Thousands of acres of small grain were sown last Fall, and now the shipments of phosphates to the interior are immense. The farmers everywhere seem anxious to go to work, and will improve the first opportun-ity to advance their interests. Their experience last year proves, too, that a crop of cotton may be made witbout incurring as henvy debts as they have heretofore done, and this fact may be of benefit to some. Experience has satisfied many farmers that the Banks which furnish the ready cash, are not a great relief after all. The fact is, that some men fool away their money thus bor-rowed in paying old debts, while a number make judiclous and well considered invest-ments in goods which in themselves are ex-tremely valuable, but which are not absolute-instance; One man spent $7.50 in buying a pistol in fifteen minutes after he borrowed it.

from the source-and at the time-they did. Very truly, S. Sir-Since reading the anomalism you sent me, I have concluded that you attempted to transcend the bounds of your reportorial sphere, and am more than ever convinced that no man should be allowed to report any-thing for the press, except prize fights and campaign meetings-certainly nothing in which it ever becomes necessary to describe a lady's dress or personal appearance-for the reason that those who suffer from color-blind-ness, ignorance of textile fabrics, total deprav-ity and natural idlocy are about equal and comprise the entire race. If what you sent me is a sample of the whole, you may thank your stars that it did not appear in print. You say of my friend : "She was a blithe and gushingly beautiful brunette, and appeared quite callous and polarizing in a handsome costume, en train, of iovely crimison organdle and slippers to match, with garnet and nar-clasi ornaments. Her modesty was in pro-portion to her loquacity and was iurid as she was modest." Land sakes alive! What stu-pendous stupidity, but "where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise." Any one, but a dot, knows that organdle is nothing but muslin-the cheapest goods on the market; that garnets are the last on the list of precious stones and almost worthless, while narcissi is nothing but jonquilis. A gay, yet dismal and loy brunctte, dressed in red muslin en train, with garnets are the last on the is nothing but omatch, indeed! Where in the name or rea-son have you been naised, if raised at all? The truth is, my friend is very warm-heart-ed, so winning and lady-like,-a lovely blonde, and wore a very fine embroidered stilk, with compantule equalets, and literally bedecked with brilliants-diamonds of the first water-whole entwined in her sliken tuesses was an exquisite wreathlet of the FIRST CLASS REPAIRER OF SHOES and BOOTS, has his shop in the office once of FIRST CLASS REPARENT OF SHOES and BOOTS, has his shop in the office once oc-cupled by Colonel Orville T.
