

SHAMROCK II, WRECKED

A Sudden Squall Sweeps Mast and Spars From the Yacht.

NARROW ESCAPE OF THE KING

Sir Thomas Lipton Intimates That the Accident May Necessitate the Postponement of the Cup Races—He Was the Only Person Struck, and Momentarily Stunned—His Story of Mishap.

Southampton, England.—The most dramatic incident in the history of the America's Cup occurred when a sudden squall on the Solent completely wrecked the new challenger and endangered the lives of King Edward and several other distinguished persons, including Sir Thomas Lipton. The results of this disaster, the occurrence of which without loss of life, seems almost miraculous, can best be judged by the written statement made by Sir Thomas Lipton as follows:

"My deepest regret is that the accident prevents me from toasting the mark at the appointed hour, and compels me to ask the New York Yacht Club to grant me an extension of time. If they will be good enough to do that I shall race, even if I have to build a boat between now and the date agreed upon. I still believe the Shamrock II, a boat worthy to be the challenger, and that, when this unfortunate chapter of accidents comes to an end, she will still stand a good chance of lifting the cup. I have not a single complaint to make against my boat.

"For the many telegrams of sympathy received from America I am deeply grateful. No one is more thankful than I am that the catastrophe ended without fatality, and I may perhaps say that throughout the trying moments His Majesty was as brave as a lion. His first thought was to inquire if any one was injured.

"Circumstances have reduced the Shamrock II to a pitiless, sparsless wreck. The story of the catastrophe is best told by Sir Thomas Lipton himself. After seeing his royal guest off for London Sir Thomas said, in answer to inquiries:

"We had just begun to make for the starting line when a fierce breeze sprang up. King Edward, Lady Londonderry, Mrs. Jameson, Mr. Watson, Mr. Jameson and myself were on deck, hanging on as best we might, for the challenger was almost at an angle of forty-five degrees. The King started to go below, just as he did so everything collapsed. A heavy block fell between the two ladies, and a wire rope struck me on the head and momentarily stunned me. A sudden squall, an unexpected strain, and everything had given way. King Edward was half way in and half way out of the companion hatchway. What happened, how all the falling spars and sweeping sails did not kill or sweep some one overboard is more than I know. When I came to I saw the King clambering over the wreckage, trying to discover the extent of the damage and asking: 'Is any one hurt?'

It is further learned that Sir Thomas's first utterance on coming to was this ardent adjuration to Mr. Watson:

"Telegraph for more spars. We have got to sail on August 20, and this boat has got to do it."

When the distinguished participants in the mishap had been safely transferred to the Erin, the King's first remark was:

"When shall we sail again, Lipton?" and before His Majesty started for London his last words to Sir Thomas were:

"When you next sail I am going with you."

Sir Thomas calculates that a delay of three weeks or a month in the date of the contest in American waters will enable him to come to the scratch. He says that he is greatly handicapped by the fact that he has no duplicate masts for the Shamrock II, but by an unlimited expenditure of money and energy he believes the defects can be remedied in time to provide for an international race this year.

THE FAIR'S DEDICATION

Formal Opening of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

ROOSEVELT THE GUEST OF HONOR

Parades, Addresses, Concerts and Illumination Mark the Beginning of the Great Exhibition—Greetings From the Presidents of the American Republics—Buffalo Brilliantly Decorated.

Buffalo, N. Y.—In the presence of a vast concourse of people, with ceremonial both conventional and novel, the Pan-American Exhibition was formally dedicated on Monday. The day's total admissions were 101,687. The day began with a parade, in which there were men from almost every country in the world, and ended with an aerial bombardment from flying bombs and a brilliant electrical illumination.

Between the two were the formal exercises of the dedication, with oratory that took its theme from the lesson of the time, prayer, music, song and poetry. The city was bright in dress of flags and bunting, the exhibition group was brilliant in color, the moving crowds were in holiday garb, and the whole effect was highly pleasing.

Vice-President Roosevelt was the guest of honor, and when he reached the hall the parade was started with a volley of aerial bombs. Two thousand troops, who got their time from four bands, led the way, and after them were a hundred carriages with the officials and guests.

Behind them came the concessionaires from the Midway, Western Indians mingled with the children of the tropics, the Orient and the Mediterranean, and gave the procession its truest touch of color. They were in native costume, and a score of artistic floats, and fifteen bands furnished music for them.

The entry of the procession to the fair grounds at noon was a magnificent spectacle. Dozens of great kites carrying streamers floated high in the air. The troops were halted in the fore court and then formed in double columns across the Bridge of Triumph.

The formal dedicatory ceremonies, in the presence of a crowd limited only by the size of the hall, were impressive. There were stirring words for closer union among the American republics and the remarks of Vice-President Roosevelt on that point and the congratulatory telegrams from the presidents of the American republics excited the greatest enthusiasm.

All of the American republics were represented at the dedication. President McKinley sent a series of congratulatory telegrams and their recitation provoked cheer upon cheer. Mayor Conrad Diehl then made the address of welcome. Robert Cameron Rogers recited a poem. When Vice-President Roosevelt was presented he was cheered vigorously.

Senator Lodge and Lieutenant-Governor Woodruff also were received enthusiastically. When Mr. Woodruff had finished the chorus, audience and band united in "America." The benediction was by Bishop William D. Walker. The closing musical number was an inspiring march by the Seventy-first Regiment Band.

At the end of the exercises in the Temple of Music there was a display of fire fireworks on the Esplanade. Twenty-seven twelve-foot gas balloons, each lettered with the names of one of the Pan-American countries and carrying below the flag of its country, were released. Forty-five aerial rockets were fired, one for each State in the Union. The night feature was the electrical show. The electrical tower was a dazzling column of lights and the play of the lights on fountains below produced most beautiful effects.

MURDER MYSTERY SOLVED

Mrs. Bonine Confesses Her Part in the Washington Tragedy.

RESIDENT OF KENMORE HOTEL SAYS SHE KILLED JAMES AYRES, THE CENSUS OFFICE CLERK—HER STATEMENT.

Washington, D. C.—The mystery attending the killing of James Seymour Ayres, a census office clerk, in the Kenmore Hotel recently, and which because of the peculiar circumstances surrounding it has aroused Washington more than any tragedy in several years, was solved by a voluntary confession from Mrs. Lulu I. Bonine, a married woman, and a guest at the house, that the three shots which ended Ayres's life had been fired in a struggle between herself and Ayres. Mrs. Bonine's husband is a commercial traveler.

The confession was entirely voluntary. Mrs. Bonine appeared at the office of Mayor Sylvester, Chief of Police, saying that she had a statement which she wished to make, and she was immediately turned over to Detective Horne, who took her confession. She said that she was alone in Ayres's room with him when the killing took place, and that the shooting was the result of his own misconduct.

At the commencement of the affair she said that Ayres had come to her room in the Kenmore Hotel about 2 o'clock a. m., and upon the pretence of being ill had gained admission to her room. He complained of feeling as if he was going to have a chill and asked her to give him some preventive. She had given him, she said, a medicine which she had in her room, and he had then referred to some differences which they had in the past and had asked her to come to his room, where they might quietly talk the matter over and come to an amicable understanding. She had agreed to go to the room as he had requested, and he left her room, preceding her to his own.

When she entered his room she found him standing behind the door with a revolver in his hand. He then told her that he had enticed her to the room for his own purposes, and that if she did not submit to his wishes he would kill her. Mrs. Bonine says that she immediately grasped the revolver, and in the struggle which ensued it was discharged three different times, striking him at each discharge, the last shot proving fatal.

Mrs. Bonine says that after the shooting she passed through the window of Ayres's room on to and down the fire escape ladder and, entering the parlor window of the second floor, passed through the parlor and back into the room in the hotel to her own room on the fourth floor. She there washed her hands, undressed and retired.

Mrs. Bonine was entirely self-possessed when she made her confession, and did not exhibit any evidence of either present or past unusual excitement. She says that it was at her husband's solicitation that she learned to practice with a revolver, and that he had made the suggestion that she should learn this art for self-defense against possible assaults.

After she had concluded her statement the woman was placed under arrest.

ELEVEN CADETS PUNISHED

Five Dismissed and Six Suspended at West Point Military Academy.

HAZING AT BOTTOM OF TROUBLE

The Officers of the Academy Upheld by Secretary Root—Severe Measures Taken to Stop Insubordination—Members of the Second and Third Classes Will Be Disciplined.

Washington, D. C.—The War Department has determined to put down the insubordination at West Point, and also to put an end to hazing. Rigorous action has been taken toward the cadets who participated in the mutiny. Five cadets have been dismissed outright from the Academy, six suspended, all for mutiny and breach of discipline, and a great number of others, comprising, it is believed, the whole second class and part of the third, are to receive such punishments as Colonel Mills may choose to inflict short of suspension. Douglas MacArthur, the son of the General, is not to be either dismissed or suspended, but will be among those whom Colonel Mills will punish as minor offenders.

Colonel Mills had a long interview with Secretary Root, who fully supports the Superintendent in his action. Colonel Mills left for West Point immediately after his conference with the Secretary of War.

An official statement of the situation at the Academy was made at the War Department. It was said that the mutiny had been guilty of acts which would not be serious in other colleges or schools, but in view of the fact that these young men were educated by the Government, at a Government institution, to learn obedience, and to learn how to command men and themselves, it was necessary for them to be under a somewhat more rigid discipline.

The trouble grew out of attempts to suppress hazing. Although promises of the suppression of hazing have been made, "bracing" still has been carried on against the orders of the officials. Class officers have failed to report cases of "bracing." There also is the case of Cadet Ralston, who was reduced for not reporting misbehavior at the mess table. These class officers were reduced and some minor punishments inflicted. The mutiny or insubordination grew out of the resentment of the second class men, who have been at the Academy three years, at these punishments inflicted by the Academy officials. It took the form of such offenses toward the superintendent as training the gun upon his quarters, and in other acts of which the Academy officers could not but take notice. This resulted in the trials and sentences to dismissal now approved by the Secretary of War.

The worst feature of the mutiny in the eyes of many army officers is the talk to the effect that the cadets had threatened to bring political influence to bear to secure the removal of Colonel Mills.

There are two other court-martial cases in the Academy pending in the department where cadets have been sentenced to dismissal. There is a rule at the Academy that a cadet invited to dinner can be excused and leave the post. Two cadets invited each other to dinner and made this their excuse for absence. Their ruse was discovered.

Not Quite So Old a Master.

At a private view of pictures by old masters recently given in London, an aged Academician was approached by a woman whose social position is unquestionable, but whose knowledge of art leaves something to be desired.

Too Much of a Paragon.

Women are proverbially careless about discussing domestic matters in public. Two of them were seated in a Chestnut street car talking about the probabilities of a marriage between two of their friends. One said:

"He is a fine man and a good man."

"Oh, yes," replied the other, "but he doesn't go to the theatre, he doesn't dance, nor smoke, nor drink. What would she do with a man like that?"

"He doesn't eat meat or drink coffee, either," chimed in the first speaker. "I should be afraid he wouldn't be cheerful."

"Of course, it doesn't seem kind to criticize a man for his virtues," said the conservative woman, "but then, it is a risk to marry a man who is not in touch with his generation. It would be a strain to live up to his standard." "Well, I'm not the one that wants to marry him." "Nor am I."

Just then the conductor called out Fifteenth street, and they got off, without once mentioning the name of this paragon, to the great regret of several other women who had been interested listeners. "I don't believe there ever was such a man," commented an elderly matron. The others shook their heads gravely, as though they, too, had their doubts.—Philadelphia Record.
