About the most important enterprise that has been undertaken in this part of the country for many a day is the improvement of Ware's Shoals on Saluda River, near Cokesbury. A company with $500,000 of capital has been organized, and we presume electric power will be furnished to the towns adjacent thereto.

If electric power should be transmitted to Abbeville a great impetus would be given to the development of the industrial interests of the city. Even if the act of the city council in granting exclusive priviliges, could be deemed a legal act, new cotton mills might be located outside the city limits, and receive power from Ware's Shoals.

If the city council were justifiable in giving exclusive rights to the use of the streets for placing the electric poles and wires of any corporation, the right to run the lines across private property we presume has never been given. In that event, if arrangements could be made with lot owners, we know of no law or equity which would exclude the transmission of power into the city for any use what-e ver. We see no wrong in making an advanta geous trade for lighting the streets for any a year. If at the end of three months he is number of years, but we are not impressed ied with the investment, he may call with the justice or the wisdom of forbidding others to enter the field, or in setting a bar to other improvements or to further progress. In equity it occurs to us that a man has as much right to ask for the exclusive right to the farmers in this section. It is a weekly establish a store, a hotel, a cotton mill, or any other public enterprise as he has to ask for the exclusive right to enter any other industrial or commercial line. Competition the life of trade. The field should be open alike to everybody, with equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

Shall We Progress ?

We believe the time has come when a new cotton mill could be built in Abbeville. We can build a small mill and own it, or we can build a large mill by asking; for outside aid Anderson is to get her fifth mill-a $500,00 institution,-and Ware's Shoals,-a mill of like size. In each instance the home capital is $100,000, and $400,000 is foreign capital. It is for the people to say whether we shall continue to grow and prosper, and whether we shall remain a finished town.

If our people wish to help themselves and to build up the town each can take shares ac cording to his ability, and then sell the same at a small discount. That is the way the other mill was built, and we have failed to hear of a single man who regrets his investment. One of the best business men in Augusta not so long ago told us that he always subscribed to the capitol stock of any enterprise that looked to the welfare of the city. He had recently subscribed a $1,000 to an entrrprise, and next day sold his stock for $900. It was not convenient for him to keep it, and it made no difference to the enterpris who held the stock. All the same the sub ecription helped.

The Beet Trust.

We see much in the newspapers about the evils of the beef trust, but as we have read but little of it, we know little as to where exists the evils of which complaint is made if a man has beef cattle to sell as every Southern man ought to have, it occurs to us that the sellers, at least, need not complain. The eaters of beef may change their rations to something else, which may be cheaper or better. And so, despite the beef trust, we may all be happy yet.

Last Saturday was a gala day for the farm Last Saturday was a gain tay for the farmers of Samter and Clarendon. The occasion was the delivery of over two car loads of Usborne machines; and about fifty farmers who purchased Osborne machines from Mr. W B. He responded with a short and pleasant talk. Several other gentlemen were also called upon and made brief remarks expressing their enjoyment of the occasion and good wishes for the success of the farmers with their new implements. One gentlemen who started on a speech about the necessity of getting out stumps before investing in machines, did not finish it when told that Osborne & Co. had a machine for that also. Mr. W B. Boyle who has been selling the Osborne machines for several years was called on, but said he was ready to talk "machine." but speaking was not in his line. Mr. W. H. Jones at the Abbeville Hardware Store is like Mr. Boyle in that he is ready to talk "machine" until he sells a car load or so of the best machines on earth.

F. A. Dunham, who has been prominently identified with the farfamed system of modern highways of New Jersey, at a meeting of the Connecticut Valley Highway association, stated that poor material well put together can be made to produce better results than first class material carelessly put together. Nothing is more fatal to durability than the drainage of the roadbed, and more particularly the subdrainage, which is often neglected. A macadam road cannot be left to itself after a completion, but needs constant supervision.

According to the statement of the president of the Missouri Good Roads association, the people of that state spent $490,000 during 1896 for road improvement, while it cost them just $600,000 for roads supervisors. DOES A BABY PAY?

A Father's View of the Entries Mad on the Family Ledger.

Does a 2-year-old baby pay for itself up to the time it reaches that interesting age? Sometimes I think not. I thought so yesterday when my own baby slipped into my study and "scrubbed" the carpet and his best white dress with my bottle of ink. He was playing in the coal hod ten minutes after a clean dress was put on him, and later in the day he pasted 50 cents' worth of postage stamps on the parlor wall and poured a dollar's worth of the choicest white rose perfumery out of the window "to see it wain."

Then he dug out the center of a nicely baked loaf of cake and was found in the middle of the dining room table with the sugar bowl between his legs and most of the contents in his stomach. He has already cost $100 in doctor's bills, and I feel that I am right in attributing my few gray hairs to the misery I endured walking the floor with him at night during the first year of his life. What has he ever done to pay me for that?

Ah! I hear his little feet pattering along out in the hall. I hear his little ripple of laughter because he has escaped from his mother and has found his way up to my study at a forbidden hour. But the door is closed. The worthless little ragabond can't get in, and I won't open it for him. No, I won't. I can't be dis-turbed when I'm writing. He can just cry if he wants to. I won't be bothered for— "Rat, tat, tat," go his dimpled knuckles on the door. I sit in silence. "Rat, tat, tat."

I sit perfectly still. 1 No reply. "Peeze, papa." Baby tum in-peeze, papa." He shall not come in. "My papa." I write on.

"Papa," says the little voice; "I lub my papa. Peeze let baby in. I am not quite a brute, and I throw open the door. In he comes with out-stretched little arms, with shining eyes, with laughing face. I catch him up into my arms, and his warm, soft, little arms go around my neck, the not very clean lit-tle cheek is laid close to mine, the baby voice says sweetly:

Does he pay? Well, I guess he does! He has cost me many anxious days and nights. He has cost me time and money and care and self sacrifice. He may cost me pain and sorrow. He has cost much. But he has paid for it all again and again in whispering those three little words into my ears, "I lub papa."

THE SPEED OF BIRDS. It Is Not Nearly So Great as Has Been

Generally Assumed. If you consult the usually accepted au thorities on the speed of birds in their flight, you are likely to be misled by an exaggeration of from 100 to 300 per cent.

This is because figures have been given on hearsay, appearance and very superficial observation. But recently American, English and French observers have been comparing notes and are practically agreed, after most careful calculation, on the speed of the best known birds. They started with the carrier pigeo and have made him a base of comparison. He has heretofore been credited with 110 miles an hour, but it is now agreed that he is entitled to 50. A quite recent long distance, carefully conducted test of 592 miles, from the Shetland islands to London, showed that the most rapid pigeons made 37 miles an hour. On shorter distances none made more Because frigate birds have been seen far from land and have been supposed not to fly by night or to rest on the water they have been credited with a speed of from 150 to 200 miles an hour. If they did fly at that speed, they would have to overcome an atmospheric pressure of from 112 to 130 pounds to the square foot of flying surface. There is no certainty that they fly more rapidly than a passenger pigeon or that they do not fly at night or do not sleep on the water. The swallow, that is indeed a rapid an hour, but he must be cut down to 65 miles, and the marten is five miles behind him, though authorities have placed him five miles slower and flies the same as the flier, has been credited with 180 miles canvasback, while both of these are five miles an hour ahead of the wild goose and eider duck. The pheasant makes 38 miles an hour, which is three miles ahead of the prairie chicken and quail, though the latter aphis temporary burst of speed that seldom exceeds 200 feet. The crow flies 25 miles Small birds appear to fly more rapidly than the large ones and have deceived many observers. The humming bird does not fly as fast as many awkward appearing, very much larger, slow flopping pirds.—Chicago Times-Herald.

HOW TO TELL DELFT.

Differences Between Real and Imitation Are Marked.

Color is the most important consideration in deciding whether or not alleged delft is genuine. Blue delft must not be too blue to be real. The natural color of the ware is a pure white. Its texture is of a hardness greatly resembling porcelain. The only thing in delft that is legitimately blue is the design or figures. These are of a deep indigo tint, the production of which is one of the secrets of Holland.

For more than two centuries potters all over the world have striven to imitate delft and have failed. The latest attempts have been made in Bonn, Germany. "Real" delft is as different from the Bonn product as silk is from satin.

In the first place Bonn delftware is, soft and not unlike majolica. A slight chip in the glaze reveals its claylike texture. Then, too, the ware itself is blue, which is an unpardonable fault. The coloring of the design seems to have spread over its entire surface.

Divergences in portraits and pictures are one of the distinguishing marks of real delft. It is all painted by hand. No machine ever comes in contact with it. Bonn delft is in a striking contrast. Absolute uniformity is obtained by the use of stencils and machine made out-

Contrary to the belief of some collectors, there is no intrinsic merit in old delft. The kind that comes from the potteries today is quite as fine and more beautiful in design than its predecessor.

The flour is sifted into the hair in handfuls, the locks are divided into sections and brushed with a soft brush until every particle of white dust has been removed. Three or four applications of flour should be used for each shampoo, as the last brushing ought to show the entire absence of dirt. The hair should be brushed every night with fine, flexible brushes which should be cleaned two or three times a week.
