My Valentine

What shall I send my love! The flowers are qead;
The scent of summer roses long have fied;
The blasts of winter long ago have blent
With dying leaves—their mission well-nigh I sent my love, when she and I were young.
With many a dream undreamed and song unsung,
A valentihe—such words as lovers write
When hearts are young and happiness in

What shall I send her, now, from out the The days so sweet that could nor would not last? Nor flowers nor words the distance can o'er-Twixt hearts that languish or 'twixt eyes that weep. The years that parted us have brought us Naught can assuage it till we meet again:

But thrught can bridge the distance to her

And thought, tonight, shall be my valentine.
