And so it is, that the building which formerly had but one tenant now has three.

But we started out to write of the glass front of the Kerr Furniture Co. Except the door posts and the skeleton of the door shurers, the front is entirely of glass. The door is recessed back for nearly six feet. The folowing bill of sizes of glass will explain:

CRITICISMS.

Various comments have been made upon the front. We believe no objection to the juality of the glass has been urged, and no fault has been found with the carpenter's work. The many compliments to the glass ront would fill an ordinary mortal's mind with conceit, but we are old.

But it has been suggested by several hat posts should be put in to hold the glassin position. Such were lorormed that the costs for that window, like Mark Twain's tollies for the country botel, hadn't come, and we were not looking for them.

Mr. Cromer said the glass was so clear that a run-away horse might not see it and run 'ght into the store, but we think very few norses would mistake The Kerr Furniture store for a stable. As a rule the comment on Messrs. W. F. Smith and Hugh Howard have completed the work of putting the glass in the store front of the K-rr Furniture Co. and as the editor of the Press and Banner happens to know more of it than he knows of other equality pretty store fronts he will write of the store with which he is best acquainted. The store room is under Pythian Hall, and was put in readiness for the enterprising firm who now do business on that corner, and from the date of the first work an the building more than a year ago there has been more of less speculation as to what would be the final outcome.

The builling is the store room formerly known as "Knox's Corner." The roof was raised nearly five feet, giving a story of about fitteen feet. It was divided into a large hall and small rooms for the Knights of Pythian, where the Knights and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers meet regularly.

Just stated, is occupied by the Kerr Furniture Company.

The floor of the basement was lowered nearly four feet, and the brick walls were lowered in the same proportion. The windows were enlarged, prismatic glass was put in, and the light comes from the side walk through wrought iron grates. A basement which was too dark to drive a nail or to lay brick without artificial light, has been made light enough for a printing office. The extensive newspaper and job printing establishment of the Press and Banner is now comfortably quartered there. ars. E L.
