A Pleasing Prospect.

Behold the judicious advertiser; If there be any one wiser Than he We should like to see Him. The Sunny Jim Of the business world With his banner unfurled, Say; Don't things come his way Every day, And don't he get there For fair? Does he mope As if he were filled with dope? Does he lie down in the road Because he has too big a load? Does he cry Because the people won't buy? Say. He ain't built that way He's to the front With a stout That gets out of the woods With the goods And he stands As the progressive spirit in all lands. He sees what the great world offers, He knows just what left To gather into his coffers And he goes straight after it. Gee Whizz, What a success he is.

We sell flour and meal made by Long's roller mills. None better. S. J. Link.

Judge and Mrs. E. B. Gary have grip and quite sick at their home on Greenville St. Their friends hope that they will soon be well.

their deaths remind us that we, too, must soon cross over the River. The remembrance of their valor on the tented field, and their exemplary conduct in the peaceful pursuits, are a rich heritage to Abbeville county and a treasure to those of us who knew them best and loved them most. Their high character and their noble conduct in war and in peace are bright examples of patriotism and good citizenship. And now, on the forty-first anniversary of the laying down of our arms, we would shed a tear for our beloved comrades, and with uncovered heads would bow in obedience to the will of the Father who deals mercifully and lovingly with all of his children. Since our last meeting these of our comrades have answered to the last roll call:
