Lovers' Lane.

It goes beneath a checked arch
Of leaf and sunlight, oak and larch;
Athwart a mead of meadow sweet,
A field of lily-bordered wheat;
Through groves of bridal birch it turns
And mossy hollows, deep in ferns;
Then up a hill and down a glen,
From Nowhere out and back again;
And many feet have worn it plain—
The errant way of Lovers' Lane.

There, unafraid, the wood folk play;
To catch and keep whatever comes
And make much work for clumsy
thumbs

Of looting toes and lacing shoe—
Such tasks as lovers love to do.
O tales there told with eye or tongue
I need not tell—if ye were young—
Nor yet of castles reared in Spain
By architects of Lovers' Lane.

If Lovers' Lane ye wander through,
That roadway's rule is "two by two,"
Although the path is wondrous straight.

For here's a hedge and there's a gate,
A brook, a stile, a quaking moss,
The strong must help the weak to cross.

Then, deep in shade ere set of sun,
Its dells are never safe for one—
Still (must the sorry truth be known?)
In Lovers' Lane I walk alone!

—Arthur Guilan, in May Scribner's.

EAST END.

NEWS ON ROUTE NO. 3.

The old John Link dwelling nine miles from Abbeville and near Link's bridge was totally destroyed by fire last Monday morning about 4 o'clock.

Ned Ferris the present tenant lost some of his household effects, amongst other things a brand new cooking stove just put up.

The plantation now owned by Dr. F. E. Harrison of this city, and we do not know whether there was any insurance or not.

This is one of the old landmarks on that side of the county and many happy associations and memories of joyous days linger in the hearts and memories of the descendants now living, notwithstanding the old home is no more.

Merry marriage bells are already beginning to sound out their sweetest chimes for one of the last daughters on route 3, and in the very hour their joyous notes will be heard loud and clear.

All the schools on route 3 have closed except one, that of Miss Sue Blackwell, and how we miss the bright, sunny face of the children none can tell save ourselves, and we will miss them from their happy homes, as they gave us many letters, as well as the teachers.

Miss Greene who has had charge of the Lebanon school has been elected as teacher in the Abbeville graded school and she is leaving for her new duties on Monday.

The entertainment given by the Lebanon school last week was as usual well attended and was in every respect a most delightful evening for those present.

The scholars acted well their part and received great credit for their part and the musical program was a grand feature of the event, the scholars rendering their pieces most beautifully, they were given from their teacher, Miss Lillian Power. Miss Ada McMillan one of Abbeville's prettiest and brightest young ladies rendered a piece most charmingly and received long and loud applause.

Miss W. C. Herbert has returned to his home in Newberry and Miss Lillian Power is now the guest of her aunt, Mrs. J. L. McMillan of Abbeville.

Mrs. Ada Kennedy closed a most successful term and has not as yet returned to her home. Mrs. Kennedy is a most successful teacher and has built up Fern Cliff school to its very best.

Mrs. J. G. Edwards, wife of Miss Lola Pennell of Abbeville, spent last week visiting relatives and friends on route No. 3, and with her wife the prettiest little party was given at her home it was most darling and the joy of her course it was most darling and the joy of her course it was most darling.

Mrs. John L. Kennedy spent a day or two of the past week with her daughter, Mrs. Edwin Parker.

Mr. Charlie Gilbert of Lebanon is one of the up-to-date farmers who believes in using his brain more and saving manual labor. He seats himself comfortably in his sulky plow, the Cultivator cracks his whip and the wheels attached do "all the work." This is a fine machine and saves much manual labor and gets along faster than any other in the old way. We are glad to note great improvement in the line, as many of our best farmers are annually introducing new labor saving implements on their farms.

Mr. and Mrs. Capers Riley and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boyd of Lebanon were shopping in the city last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tarrant and daughters of Mt. Carmel were guests in the city one day of the past week.

Miss Janie Mabry left last Monday for a trip to Greenville.

Mrs. G. W. Spear and Mr. Arthur Speer were here from Monterey Monday, Mr. Speer came to Abbeville enroute to his home in Newberry, Anson and where he has a position as draftsman, with the L. & N. Rail Road.

Miss T. M. Miller attended the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows in Greenville last week.

Mrs. P. P. Rosenberg and Mr. G. A. Visanski went to Atlanta Sunday to see Miss Belle Visanski who is spending a while there with Dr. Geo. W. Spear.

Miss Marie Gary left Tuesday for Columbia where she goes to act as Sponsor for Camp Seclusion for Miss Gary is one of Abbeville's most attractive young daughters of the Confederacy and Camp Seclusion could not have chosen a fairer representative.

Miss Manie Winstock of Charleston is spending a while here with her niece Miss Irene Rosenberg.

Mrs. Mary Garrett went to Monterey Monday to spend a while with Mrs. G. W. Spear after visiting her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Garrett, here for some time.

Mrs. F. B. Gary and Master Frank Gary are in Florence visiting relatives.

WEST END.

News From Picked Up Here and There About the City.

Miss Louise DeBruhl and Mr. M. P. DeBruhl left Monday for Columbia where they will

Death of Mr. John H. Ashley.

Mr. John H. Ashley died at his home near Abbeville May 12th, 1906. His death was indeed a very sad one. He leaves a disconsolate wife and eight children to mourn his death. These mourn, but not as those who have no hope, for they have the assurance that he is in a better world although it is their loss, yet for him it is gain.

His place in home is vacant and sad. His homelife was a very happy one and his devotion to Wife and Children was unusually tender and loving. His Christian walk was above reproach.

It is seldom that one passes the confidence of his fellow men to the extent which he did.

His was a positive character. During his long, painful and tedious illness, he bore it all with patience and without a murmur. He is gone but not forgotten.

The funeral services were conducted by his Pastor, Rev. J. C. Shive, in his home.

His remains were then placed in the upper Long Cane Cemetery amid a concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends.

"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from hence forth. Ye shall rest from their labors; and their works do follow them. He is resting but his work will go on."

We know the devoted wife and Children are greatly bereft, but are sustained by the blessed hope of immortality and await the time when we shall meet on the other shore. Where parting will be no more.

Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union.

Communications for this column should be addressed to J. C. Strickling, Pendleton, S. C.

Eternal Vigilance is the price of Liberty.

Did you ever hear of a great victory being won without a hard fight? Farmers eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty! Constant attendance at your local union is the price that you must pay to keep up the life of your organizations.

Have something good and new to talk about at every meeting you have. Leave the bad news for the unorganized growler to tell; he always enjoys the telling of that kind of news, any way.

Union men, never for a moment forget the fact that your union is made up of the reputation and character of its members, and that each and every member of the union is at it all the while building up the strength of the Union; or pulling down the influence and power of his Union at all times! The Union password or the Union sign or grip do not make the man a good Union member; it is the good works and the character of each member that tells the tale.

Give to the Union a good reputation and you have a power for good. Make a reputation for good works and you will be prosperous and happy.

Abolish the Blinders.

We find an item in the Savannah Weekly News, which we can heartily endorse. We have not used blinders on a horse for years. If we have to take a new bride with blinders, we cut them off before using it.

The best handers of horses are condemning blinders.

The purpose of blinders is to shut off from view the object from behind that might cause the horse to become alarmed and try to run away.

As to this, blinders have proven more disastrous than beneficial. If a horse passes some object that is not fully understood by him and causes fright, the shutting off from view of this scarecrow by blinders only increases the fear.

Any horse of ordinary good sense can soon be taught not to scare at flags, cars, covered wagons, umbrellas, etc., by letting him see them and understand them.

Give the horse the full power of all his senses; let him see, hear, and smell, if he be so, to satisfy his fears.

Wilson, Henry & Co. offer special inducements for your trade on Mondays.

Plant Cow-Peas.

Plant cow peas, young man, and you will not have to go west for rich lands.

Plant cow peas, young man, and pay back to nature's God the debt that your forefathers owe for the crime of robbing the land of its life-giving powers to all the flora and fauna of our lovely Southland.

Plant cow peas, young man, that you may grow cotton more cheaply and double the yield per acre, thus bringing in double the returns for your labor that at high priced labor that you are compelled to use.

Plant cow peas, young man, even if you have to pay $1.00 per peck for seed. This will drill in more than one acre, which will make a ton of good hay and at the same time improve the land and double the yield of oats to follow, and will permit your oat crop to be planted early in the fall, which is important in order to insure a stand that will resist winter freezing.

Plant cow peas, young man, and quit sowing wild oats and skinning the land like some fathers have done.

Profits of Cotton in Action.

Are we expecting the cotton spinners to come to the cotton grower for cotton unless the growers have the cotton?

We repeat again that the spinners of cotton will never come to producers for cotton until producers bulk their cotton in such quantities as will warrant their coming. It is well perhaps to have these conferences with millmen in order to have a better understanding as to better handling, packing and ginning the staple; but when the cotton farmer goes to the spinner for help to maintain profitable prices for his cotton he is just simply acting the fool.

There is no other occupation or craftmen under the sun that can do anything to help cotton farmers that will not try to help themselves. Cotton farmers must organize and bulk their cotton, and then spinners or any one else that wants cotton will come to the men that have the cotton without any asking. Educate cotton farmers in the business side of their farming and show them the profits, and they will act in concert of action and they will act to show the farmers that there is dollars in organization and he will organize just so soon as he can be shown that the dollars are there. Farmers do not stick to sentiment like they do to dollars.

Marching Through Georgia.

Sherman's much vaunted march to the sea had none of the features of a military campaign, made no demands upon the strategic talents of the commander nor the fighting qualities of his men. It was a mere leisurely parade from Atlanta via Charleston and Columbia until the North Carolina boundary was passed. For before it commenced Hood's absurd movement into Tennessee and relieved Sherman of all armed opposition worthy the name. Thereafter he met only the desultory obstruction which a skeleton skirmish line of old men and children could offer, until the weak garrison of Savannah and Charleston could be thrown at his path, reinforced by a miniature cavalry corps under Hampton. He was not even brought to stand until, after passing Fayetteville, the wrecks of Hood's army were joined to the troops already mentioned, when General Joseph E. Johnston struck him as staggering blow at Bentonville that he suspended further advances until Schofield's fresh corps, outnumbering the Confederate force under Johnston, could join his left flank from Wilmington.

But the "March to the Sea" ended at Charleston, and that point was reached without the expenditure of so much ammunition as might serve Mr. Roosevelt for a week's outing in the Rockies; which would have impeded along the main highways of travel, and was destitute of any of the circumstances of war except the wholesale banishment of the country through which it led. The passage of the army was one irrevocable step towards the final result of the war, which in one sense but deliberately conceived and mercifully executed. The truth of the episode of the war which led to the deep scars on Southern hearts. Most of these who wrought and those who suffered that consummate destruction have gone to their final reward. But the utter lack of delicacy and of comprehension which led the son of Sherman to project triumphal processions, under escort of United States troops, through Georgia and South Carolina, through the hearts of his father's bloodless soldiers of a defenseless people, constitutes a provocation and a justification for reviving the truth of history.

Naturally the Rev. Mr. Sherman regards the achievements of his parent through other eyes than those of the writer and other record. Filial affection would make him blind to blench in the career of his progenitor. Also there is no just reason why he should not, if the retrospect enters to his pride, make pilgrimage through the region with which his name is as indissolubly linked as that of Nero with Rome or Titus with Jerusalem. The Atlanta have been re-erected, the roofless rebelled, the fields are smiling now with the blood of the harvest, and the unobtrusive tourist, whatever his name and lineage, would be sure of courteous treatment and of the best of the country's produce. But to plan a formal procession, riding in the midst of the trappings and insignia of armed force to project the character of a triumph of the entire South, to mock at their past misfortunes, and to insult them by the suggestion that the Federal soldiery and authority were needed to secure the safety of any peaceful and law-abiding sojourner within their gates. It is surprising that any general officer of the army should have been so deficient in good taste and feelings as to take part in such a vulgar and unseemly procession.

To the credit of public sentiment all over the country, the press has spoken as with one voice in its reprobation of the historical function so improvidently conceived between "guns and words"; and it is a pleasure to see how readily the Federal soldiery and authority were needed as the central figure. We warrant that his fears of maltreatment, if he had any, will be grossly dispelled by a courteous and hospitable folk, and that their own sensibilities are not outraged, are careful not to trespass upon the natural susceptibilities of others.
