DO NOT WAIT.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him—yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
Sung by any child of song,
Praise it. Do not let the singer
Wait deserved praises long.
Why should one who thrills your heart
Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you
By its humble, pleading tone,
Join it. Do not let the seeker
Bow before his God alone.
Why should not your brother share
The strength of "two or three" in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling
From a weeping brother's eyes,
Share them. Yes, and by the sharing,
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should anyone be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh is rippling
Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it. 'Tis the wise man's saying,
"For both grief and joy a place."
There is goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out brave and truly
Ere the darkness veil the land.
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go;
Leave them. Trust the Harvest Giver;
He will make each seed to grow.
So until its happy end
You shall never lack a friend.

DAYS GONE BY.

Oh, the days gone by! Oh, the days gone by!
The apples in the orchard and the pathway
through the rye.
The chirp of the robin, and the whistle of
the quail
As he piped across the meadows sweet as any nightingale;
When the bloom was on the clover and the
lilies in the sky,
And my happy heart brimmed over in the
days gone by.

In the days gone by, when my naked feet
were tripped
By the honeysuckle tangles where the water
lilies dipped,
And the ripple of the river lipped the moss
along the bank;
Where the placid eyed and lazy footed cattle
came to drink,
And the tilting snipe stood fearless of the tra-
ant's wayward cry,
And the splashing of the swimmer in the days
gone by.

Oh, the days gone by! Oh, the days gone by!
The music of the laughing lip, the luster of
the eye,
The childish faith in fairies and Aladdin's
magic ring,
The simple, soul reposeing, glad belief in everything.
When life was like a story, holding neither
sob nor sigh
In the golden, olden glory of the days gone by.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

A HEALTHY MAN.

Here Are the Points That Go to Make a Centenarian.

Here are the points of a healthy man.
If you have them all you may, barring accidents, count on being a centenarian. If you have most of them, you'll reach a ripe old age, but even if you have only a few don't be alarmed, for many apparently crazy human machines last a surprisingly long time.

First, your body and limbs should be plump, but the plumpness should be of the firm and muscular, not the fleshy type. Your figure ought to be erect, and, whether you are tall or short, well proportioned. Length without breadth is a very bad thing in a man, for there is no room for vital organs large enough to thoroughly perform their duties.

Your step should be springy and elastic, your gait firm and easy. These things indicate muscles of good quality and nerve of good tone. Your eye should be bright and neither prominent nor hollow. Bright eyes show that the circulation of blood in the brain is good.

Your complexion should be clear and fresh. It is usually not well with you when your face is pale, sallow, florid or subject to sudden flushings. But in this matter your occupation has great influence, and you might have the worst possible complexion and be in perfect health. But that, of course, is the exception, not the rule.

Your head should not be very large, or at least if it is large your neck, shoulders and chest ought to correspond in size. If you feel your pulse, it should be regular; if it drops a beat now and again or beats very fast and excitedly after the least exertion or emotion then the heart is weak. Your breathing should be tranquil and inaudible. Any sounds mean that the passages are more or less clogged.

You should not know you have a stomach—that is to say, as a rule. Of course there are times when that organ gets out of order in the healthiest individual, and then it is always sure to make its own way of its existence. You should always, except when the weather is bitterly cold, feel comfortably warm through your whole body, even to the tips of the fingers and toes. Otherwise something is wrong with the circulation or the heat-producing apparatus.

You should have sound sleep, without dreams or nightmares, and it should not last too long or too short—say, eight to eight and a half hours every night.

Your voice should not be hoarse, and you should be a stranger to sore throats. Your appetite should not be too great or too small, while you should not be a sufferer from headaches, giddiness or neuralgia, and, of course, you should not have palpitations or faintings or various veins. If you answer to the above description, you have neither disease of the brain, spinal cord, heart, lungs, liver, stomach, muscles or nerves, and you are in as perfect health as it is possible for human beings to be.

But at the same time many a round shouldered, narrow chested, thin and sallow man is as tough as steel, works hard and lives till he is almost tired of the world, and, of course, even the healthiest of us must go through a course of colds, coughs, headaches, dyspepsia attacks and the like.

Still, if your chest is small in proportion to the rest of your body you are likely to have less stamina, and you should not overdo such things as football, cycling or even brass work.—New York World.

He Did His Best.

In an Aberdeen bookshop an old lady was inquiring for a copy of the Bible, and the shopkeeper brought forward one at half a crown. But the old lady wanted something cheaper. A copy at 18 pence was produced containing illustrations. But the illustrations, the old lady averred, entailed superfluous expenditure.

"Then, here," said the shopkeeper, "is a copy for a shilling which contains a 'that's necessary for salvation.'" He descended from the ladder and laid it before his customer.

"But has ye no something a wee bit cheaper?" asked the old lady.
"Wumman, wumman," said the shopman, "ca' upon the Almighty to come down and sell ye his ain publications, for I can dae nae mair!"—London Chronicle.

A Financial Shake.

"Good morning Mr. Toney. On the sick list today?"
"Yes, sir; got the agna."
"Do you ever shake?"
"Yes."
"When do you shake again?"
"Can't say when; shake every day. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothing in particular, only I thought if you shook bad I'd like to stand by and see if you couldn't shake the 18 shillings out of your pocket which you have owed me so long!"—London Standard.

Tortoise Shell.

What is called tortoise shell is not the bony covering or shield of the turtle, but only the scales which cover it. These are 18 in number, 8 of them flat and 5 a little curved. A large turtle affords about eight pounds of them, the plates varying from an inch to a quarter of an inch in thickness.

The Fool and His Money.

"Optimism," said the sorry fool, "is seeing the green side of a $5 bill."
"And what is pessimism?" asked his friend.
"Seeing neither side of a $5 bill."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Shaves and Shavers.

Since the time of the ancient Greeks trimming of the beard by some means or other has been in vogue. Since that time there has been advances in all lines, but none so radical as in the method of shaving. The ancients plucked their beards. This was attended with much pain and discomfort. Today you can shave yourself with a Christy Safety Razor with genuine pleasure and no fear of cutting yourself. They cost only a dollar and a half. Come in and let us show them to you. Use a Christy and no longer will shaving be an ordeal to be dreaded.
