Prohibition Prophet

Senator Tillman spoke wise when he sald system, the combined opposition bids fair to win, when prohibition will follow. The conthe old time bars, and it looks like the prohibition wave may sweep the State. Georgia has enacted a prohibit ion law, and bar keepers are said to be making ready to move or go out of the business on or before the first of

A sure enough true, prohibition law would be a consummation devoutly to be wished The people of South Carolina need protect tion from the drug habit too.

The people should be taught that all intoxicating liquois are more or less poisonous and that whatever is poisinous that is taken into the stomach, the very citadel of life is injurious and will sooner or later disturb that which nature has assigned it. With the stomach ruined or injured life itself becomes a burden.

Young people, or those who have olde grown, should be impressed with the importance of taking care of the stomach. Intoxicating liquors and other drinks should be avoided. There is no good and much harm in so called harmless drinks. Nursing mothers if they would not impart to their innocent babes the desire for intoxicants should . themselves abstain from the use of intoxicants.

Prohibition is a good thing if we have pro hibition. But before this people goes into prohibition, we hope to see the hours shortened in which liquor may be sold in the dispensary. If the dispensary was opened at ten oclock in the morning and closed at two oclock all the needed liquor could be bought and nobody will deny that liquors are need ed in the treatment of the sick. Old people often need it and from the infirm should not be taken the right to buy it lawfully.

The habit of disregarding the laws of health and then dosing the stomach with either intoxicants or deleterious drugs, is working in, jury to human life. Men should remembe that for every act of dissipation there will be a reckoning in future years, and if they would remember that their stomachs are not copper lined, they would have better health d would live longer and happier.

Nature, if allowed a chance would repair many of the ills for which, too many of us fly to drugs, with which to ruin our stomach

Crescent Ale.

Some industrious gent up about Virgini has been selling a drink known as Crescen Ale, in this part of the country. The ale looks like lager beer, tastes like lager, and the Sheriff says that it is lager beer.

It sells like hot cakes! Whenever a fellow tries a bottle he comback promptly after another, and another. This ale was evidently made at an up-to date brewery. Some who have tested it claim that it is even superior to the stuff that Mr. Joe Jones sells down on Rosenberg block The retailers who bought this ale doubtless did not know what they were buying; but stuff was taken as a medicine. The same now they have fair warning. If you are selling Crescent Ale ship it back quick before the clabber with as much gusto as would a ditcher Sheriff reaches your place.

He cannot select a drink at a drug store that will please his over satiated and morbid ap-source of such an evil as this. It would be so much easier to stop the evil by biotting out Have you seen him hanging on the fountain head than by handling it after it post? has been distributed all over the State.

A man who would come through the coun try and sell a thing like this without putting leave them to bear the brunt of the law, igno rant of what they have bought from him, that they were buying a good quality of beer

Two Pretty Printers.

. The Young Boy and the Street.

What do you think when you see a young lad hanging to an awning post or kicking the sides of a goods box in blissful idleness? What do you think when you see a boy loaf ing about the square when his father is bard at work making bread for him, and his mother laboring from sun to sun to keep him at ease; what do you think?

Some parents treat their children as if they had millions, as if they thought it would never be necessary for their children to earn a livelihood, while they are at it night and day, striving to keep the wolf from the door-The young buck is out in fine clothes adorning the idewalks and talking about thingsvarious things.

Some people are imbued with a mawkish morbid, measly pride that causes them to d consider work on the part of their boys and that the dispensary was "a step towards pro- girls, as a degredation to be avoided; or is it hibition" Because of the management of the that they refuse to make the boys work bedispensary and because of hatred of an in- cause they would have others believe that stitution which supplanted the licensed bar they are above work from a pecuniary standpoint. Do such parents hope to leave, their chilstitution of this state forbids the licensing of dren an estate that will keap them in the lap of luxury for a lifetime? When is time to learn a lad that he must work for a living when the mind is in a plastic state and sus ceptible to influences, or when he has finished his education and his mind has aiready shaped Itself?

Do you remember that time some desultor; years back in the past when you were a lad and with a party of other lads were off from the "old folks" having a good time? There were all kinds of boys in that bunch, goodbad and indifferent. Certain ones told you things that you had never heard of, others proposed a certain piece of mischief that you knew was not mischief but almost criminal organ in the proper discharge of the duty and you promptly reminded the boys of the fact-"nit." You knew it was wrong but you would not have told that bunch so for any consideration. You feared the appellation of the "unco gude" as the devil fears holy water. You followed the aggregation through every hase to the finish. Some of the things you did were harmless or mild devilment, other things you learned and did are with you today.

Some man said, "I am a part of all that I have ever met, and he spoke the truth. A man is a part of all that he comes in contact with just as certainly as the flower which springs from the earth partakes of the moisture, the elements of the earth in which it has lain, and even the sun which shines upon t and from which it gets its coloring.

It is pleasant for the lad on the streets. There is congenial company, beauty color, change, food for the curlosity; excitants, good and bad; all kinds of things to interest, to admire: a constant phantas magoria to please the senses, and so he hangs to the awning post and kicks the sides of the good boxwhile his father labors away at his business and his mother devotes her attention to his interests (?).

Does the father know what the boy does and says from the time he leaves in the morning until he comes back for his daily bread? The youth does not innocently hang on the awning post all day, he does other things. He spends nickels and dimes, the value of which he does not know, for he did not make them. He adds to his store of knowledge things that were better unlearned. By his associates he is put wise to things that older people wish they did not know. Some six thousand years ago the command came to man, by the sweat of thy brow shall thou earn thy bread, and the command did not make any exception of the youth. What s good for the goose is good for the goelin.

In the absence of law in the homes of its sople, the city of Anderson has found it nec sary to enact a curiew law. All boys must be in their homes by 10 o'clock at night. The ecessity for such a law pressages a mos morbid condition in society.

There are lads who actually approach soda fountain with ennui and call for coco cola with a kind of martyr spirit as if the boy if he were at work would drink a cup o He cannot select a drink at a drug store that

A Good Man.

Mr. Isaac A Keller a mighty good man is state the head of the farmers organization in his country, and he is wooking with all his energy and ability for the benefit of his brocher farmers. He has made a good estate at farming, and no better man could have been selected to lead the farmers to victory.

So that you can be found. The onlice with the cotton bears on the onslaught of all the cotton bears on the onslaught of all the cotton bears on the constraint of the onslaught of all the cotton bears on the constraint of the onslaught of all the cotton bears on the charming and it is constraint to show you can be importance of sowing a large crop of small grain this fall to fortify yourselves to small grain this fall to fortif second, how to put more brains in your work.

These principles applied to farming properly will do wonders in the way of making fine crops, but your profits just here are in uncertain status if you allow others to name the price for your products. There is in most men a kind of disposition to take all that the other fellow will allow, and the profits in your year's labor have gone to others who have neither spent a day's labor or a dime to produce the crop.

Just here is the strong position of the Farmers' Union whose objects are to combine their spents. Speaking for this editor personally, almost any sort of an old Democrat will satisfy him.

Of course it would be an idle dreamer who would expect to elect a Democrat or anybody else who would disturb the present prosperity of the country.

The above letter explains itself. The Southorn Cotton Association is about to fix the price of cotton for the coming crops. It is a matter that should be thoroughly weighed before attempting to fix a price. It is so easy to make a mistake that might cost much money to the South.

The Cotton ssociation should first consult the Farmers Union before fixing a price and see if it is not possible to get a price fixed that will be agreeable to both institutions. For the Association to fix a price at one figure and the Union at another means confusion worse confounded. Let the two organizations get together and fix a minimum price at, say 12% cents per pound, which is under the pres ent price. It would be far better to ask at least 121/2 cents and get it than to ask 15 cents and not get it.

Let the farmers make a reasonable demand and then let them slick to their figures to the end. Fix a price and stay by it. This would only mean that you will not sell a pound of cotton below 121/2 cents or such price as you may fix, and you should get as much more as the market will warrant.

It is true that cotton is now selling at from 131/2 to 133/2 cents per pound, but this is based on the old crop and is due to the inadequacy of the supply. If it develops later that reports are true which indicate a short crop for Texas, Louisians and Mississippi, the minimum price can be raised accordingly to 14 or 15 cents. If, on the contrary, the crop in these States is found to be about normal, and the splendid condition here is unchanged there is danger of a slump, and these differ ent organizations will be powerless to sustain price all out of proportion with the size of the crop. Better to fix a rate that can be sus tained even if there is a large crop, than to fix a price too high and lose prestige in the failure to make good. There is demand for thirteen million bales American cotton. This last crop has demon strated that fact, and the further fact that 123 to 18 cents is a fair price for a crop of this size. Let the Cotton Association and the Union keep in touch with the outside world, and if it is concluded that the crop will not exceed thirteen million bales, let them stand for 12 or 13 cents cotton.

Charleston Wins.

Charleston has about won out in its strugtle for a steamship line to Europe. Baran Von Pilis of the North German Lloyd is in Columbia to-day and was in Charleston yes

Charleston but to the entire State as well. It is only a question of time until we will take our share of the business from New York and Boston, which was wrested from us year

There is now no steamship line from Char leston to Europe and if we would visit the old world we must, per force, go to New York to catch a steamer. Such conditions will no ast much longer, and we hall the day when we can have a part of the maratime business It seems that we have been sleep all this time, while all the exports and imports of the south going and coming by way of New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

The new south will not stand for such conditions longer, and we may look for a change in the near future.

House Party.

There are houseparties in which are gathered the gay and beautiful maidens and the andsome youths from city and country side. It is very much in vogue to call in these hap py hearts, as if into a family, and to turn over the premises to merry-making. There is the soft music, the sweet cadence of youthful voices and the dance that in itself is rothm. Surely the blind poet knew some thing of the wiles of the dance hall when he

'Cume and trip it as you go On a light fantastic toe." Such a house party, with its aggregation of youth and beauty is the dream of those on pleasure bent, but we would mention another house party which must be given precedence Reference is had to the reunion of the family When the children of one family have been scattered by the vicisitudes of fortune: when "some have gone to lands far distant, and with strangers made their homes"; when father and mother are left around the old fireside to dream of by-gone days; the call that re-unites them in the family circle is fraught with pleasure that the angles might well envy. What if some have wandered from the

In addition to the fact that he was a skilled mechanic he possessed also a graceful manner, charitable spirit, and a goodness of heart that binds humanity to humanity. He will be missed not only at the Abbeville cotton mills but in the entire sphere of his acquaintance ship.
The sympathy of the Abbeville people go out to the stricken family, we suffer together with them for we know that we have lost a friend and a good citizen. Mr. Schroeders interest in humanity, the grace of humility which he possessed to a remarkable degree, and the desire to upilft which was a part oil him endeared him to the entire list of his acquaintances and as he was a peaceful man with us, as it was his nature to seek for peace quaintances and as he was a peaceful man with us, as it was his nature to seek for peace may peace be his portion beyond.
