MRS. ROMADKE, A MILWAUKEE MILLIONAIRE'S WIFE, TELLS REASON FOR TURNING BURGLAR

Glamour Thrown by a Yellow Newspaper Over Adventures of Criminals Attracted Her to a Similar Life -- She Craved Excitement and Had Nothing Else to Do.

Chicago .- Mrs. Evelyn Romadke, wife of the Milwaukee millionaire trunk maker, who was sentenced to serve a prison term for burglary, told the story of her downfall to Judge Bretano. She left a home of luxury in Milwaukee, where she had everything a woman naturally would desire, to come to Chicago to associate with thieves, and eventually entered upon a career of burglary to satisfy her own morbid craving for excitement. She declares emphatically that she owes her downfall to the constant perusal of stories of crime printed in what she called

"I had nothing else to do," she said. "I was married, but no one tried to add to my amusement or happiness. I read all my books, and then I took to reading copies of this newspaper." She mentioned one by name. "The glamour which it three over the acts and adventures of criminals, the exaggeration of everything but the iniquity of their offenses, attracted me.

"I wanted to meet these thieves," Mrs. Romadke continued. "I had the idea I would be absorbed in the stories a real burglar could tell. I wanted to test the interest awakened in me in their lives and see whether it was real. I even had a desire to try whether I myself could steal without detection. FOR SIX BANKS "Well, I came to Chicago. Part of the time I lived in a South Side flat. It was there I met Albert Jones, the negro. 'I can tell you some stories about stealing that would make your hair stand on end,' Jones told me, or something like that, and that was the way we became accounted. I talked with him getting the stories of first head and not acquainted. I talked with him, getting the stories at first hand and not from the yellow newspapers any more. Testifies About Her Acquaintance With Arthur Brown, of Utah.

RECITAL AFFECTS THE JURY

Yielded to Protestations of Love-He Promised to Make Her His Wife-How He Finally Refused -Near Physical Collapse.

Washington, D. C .- With hundreds of eyes levelled at her and the son of the man she killed gazing steadily into her face Mrs. Annie M. Bradley took the witness stand in her own defense in her trial for the murder of ex-Senator Arthur Brown, of Utah, in the Raleigh Hotel last December. Mrs. Bradley rose almost willingly when the bailiff called her name. She took the oath and firmly mounted the two steps leading to the witness chair, but when she faced the curious crowd she turned deathly white and seemed about to faint. There was no one near but a court official and as she gave her full name in answer to a question it was impossible even for him to hear what she said. For nearly two hours the court stenographers were compelled to re-peat Mrs. Bradley's answers. It seemed impossible for her to gather the strength to make herself heard. When court adjourned at 3 o'clock p. m., by careful and steady questioning Judge Powers, chief counsel for Mrs. Bradley, had directed her through the entire course of her affair with Brown, from the time she met him in the spring of 1892 until the end of November, 1906, a few days before he started on the journey to Washington that ended in his death.

It was a pitiful story that Mrs. Bradley told, a story of an infatua-tion that forced the woman to give up family, home and friends for the man who constantly promised to make her his wife, who professed undying de-votion to her continually telling her that she was "the only bright spot in his life," yet who dragged her through the mire and forced her name upon the lips of every man in Salt Lake

Mrs. Bradley said she was thirtyfive years of age; that she was born in Kansas City and educated in Denver; that she had had smallpox and pneumonia, and had been badly hurt by a blow on the head when a child. She went to Salt Lake City in 1890, and had lived there ever since. She had occupied a clerical position in the Salt Lake Water Works for three years and eight months. "Were you ever married?" she was asked by Judge Powers. "Yes, sir; I was married to Clarence Bradley a week after I left the water works." Two children, a boy and a girl, resulted from this union, che said. Mrs. Bradley joined several literary and political organizations, and through them became acquainted with Senator Brown. them. She cried, she said, when Mr. Brown made his first race for the United States Senate and was defeated, but he cheered her with the essurance that, whatever happened, they would stay together.

Mrs. Bradley told about the birth of two boys; of how she had agreed in 1901 that Brown should get a divorce and marry her, and when she had warned him that it would cost him his position he had declared that he cared for nothing but her. went to Grand Junction, Col., in that year, and notwithstanding the place was 300 miles from Salt Lake City, the Sanator came to see her every ten

While they were at Grand Junction, Mrs. Bradley continued, Brown assured her that his arrangements for a divorce were progressing, and that a compromise with Mrs. Brown had been agreed upon. Mrs. Bradley said the told him to give the wife and her children all his property. He then gave Mrs. Bradley a ring.

Nearly every member of the jury showed the effect of Mrs. Bradley's testimony. Few of the jurors could keep back the tears as she sobbed out her pathetic story. May Brown, the dead man's son, did not take his eyes off Mrs. Bradley's face from the minute she took the stand, and in all In the sea of faces which Mrs. Bradley confronted there was not one on which was not written the reflex of the feelings of the lone little figure in black baring her soul to the world.

> Fought Four Hours-Woman Housekeeper Who Cried "We Won't Surrender!" Among the Dead.

> St. Petersburg, Russia.-After ascertaining the address of the Riga headquarters of the Lettish revolutionists the local police demanded admittance. The housekeeper, Greta Thomson, fifty-seven years old, cried out, "We shall not surrender without a fight!" whereupon a volley of shots was poured through the doors on the police, who were occupying both the front and rear stairs. The police re-tired into a neighboring apartment and attic, as the conspirators are living on the top floor of a five-story house, and for four hours fired volley after volley through the walls and ceiling. The resistance finally ceased and when the police entered they found the bodies of four dead, including the Thomson woman; two wounded girls and four wounded men, in-cluding one Hebrew. The latter at-tempted to escape and was killed.

It is estimated that the revolutionists fired 700 shots from a Mauser and three Brownings before their weapons were shattered. One policeman was slightly wounded, although all wore armor.

Late the next night the Octobrist Club was the scene of a sharp conflict between the left and right wings of the party. The former, led by M. Vladimir Lvoff, of Samara, a brother of M. But as the women from Montgomery, Birmingham and Selma arrived first the lobby was so crowded that the Mobile contingent could not get even to the doors. As soon as the speechmaking began the women cheered every good point until the galleries and the hall were in an uproar.

a question which is rapidly becoming the question of the time-the forming of the coming race by the training of mothers. Great point is given to his appeal by the presentation of statistics relating to two American families-first, that of Jonathan Edwards, the theologian; and second, that of the ancestor of a race of criminals:

"Of a thousand descendants in the first case, 464 were distinguished men-judges, professors, lawyers, college presidents, physicians, clergymen and authors; while of 1200 descendants of the other, 310 were professional paupers, 130 convicted criminals, sixty habitual thieves, and self-wrecked, showing a record of crime, insanity and pauperism almost without precedent. What proportion of these two results is attributable to woman?" Professor Long contends that modern life tends to divide the interests of fathers and mothers, the former being content with earning bread and remaining master of the house, while the mother is left almost alone to train, for good or evil, the children. The old adage, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," is so worn as to be obsolete for many. It is no eraggeration to say that "if all Englishmen were the sons of good mothers we should be a new nation."

> SCHOOL TEACHERS Also Have Things to Learn.

"For many years I have used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system,' writes a veteran school teacher. "Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poison-

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head and, at times after exertion, a general 'gone' feeling with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years. "A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years ago I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum, which I did not like at all. "This time, however, my friend made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Suddenly I found myself improving in a most decided fashion. "The edor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts, which I am glad to make known."
