Men More Important than Resources,
Says President Barrett

WANTS BETTER SCHOOLS

Government Should Spend from Fifty to One Hundred Millions Each Year to Check the Trend From the Farm to the City by Providing Good Country Schools.

At Atlanta, Ga., in sober business phrases nearly four score delegates, appointed by sixteen Southern Governors, Friday foretold an amazing growth in wealth and population for the South within the next ten years. Representing the agriculture and business interests of every section of Dixie, these delegates gathered to assist the executive committee of the Southern Commercial Congress work out a non-political and disinterested plan for promoting development of the South's millions of unoccupied acres and its vast unused water powers, the enlargement of its business and industry, both by its own inhabitants and through judicious advertising of its resources throughout America and Europe.

As the representative of more than two million farmers, Charles S. Barrett, president of the Farmers' Union, stressed the necessity of conserving men first, rather than the resources of the soil. "If you conserve the nation's raw resources and neglect the nation's men, you will meet disaster and ultimate defeat in your undertaking," he said. "The nation has not been conserving the farmer, the man who is a greater asset than all your powers, coal lands, forests or gold mines."

"A cortege of really patriotic Americans is trying to head off the efforts of the Morgan-Gubbenheim interests to bottle up, or 'hog' the coal and gold of Alaska. They have succeeded in rousing a nation to their assistance. We have had the menace of Ballingerism placarded from one end of America to the other. We have been warned in trumpet tones, of the encroaching water power interests which may, in the long run, absorb all the water power of the country and in the end become the king of all the other trusts. We have been told of the penalty of giving over our forests to greedy timber interests. We have been shown what will happen if we do not checkmate the money lust of the coal, the gold and the timber barons.

"This is all worthy, this is all admirable. But while we battle against these foes of the Republic, we leave to his own devices the man whose vital function it is to feed and largely to clothe this nation, the man whose combined product yield a greater annual value than our mines or forests or water powers, the man whose problems will be more than ever the nation's problems when the earth shall have been stripped of its coal and gold."

He said the Government should spend fifty to one hundred million dollars annually to check the trend from the farm to the city by improving common school and scientific agricultural educational facilities in every country, in easy reach of the farmers' children. He would provide against "the contamination of the corrupt alien strains that sow seeds of unrest and disreputation that may ripen into a ruinous harvest."

Mr. Barrett stressed the necessity of keeping a perpetual watch upon our national and State Legislators. "The battle for conservation is not here in this auditorium. It comes in the elections of November. It comes after that in the halls of Congress. It comes two years hence, in the selection of a president and a Congress that are committed to the public and not the private welfare. And then it comes year after year, for conservation is so big a war that it probably will not be ended until your children and mine stand in our places."

Mr. Barrett paid a warm tribute to Gifford Pinchot to whose "unselfish public spirit, patience under humiliation and untiring zeal," he attributed the present advancement to the cause of conservation. "I am confident," he said, "that when the verdict of history is written his name will stand high among the names of the men who have wrought for the salvation of our common country."

Postal Saving Banks

Postal savings banks opened Oct. 1st. Whatever may have been the conflict of views as to their desirability they are now an accomplished fact and doubtless will be a boon to a large number of people who from timidity have hidden their money in clocks, under trees, below the kitchen floor and in other places rather than deposit it in banks. The saving instinct does not seem to be so pronounced in America as it is in many other countries and if the postal banks develop that instinct it will be a good thing. In Great Britain 10,000,000 depositors have over $700,000,000 to their credit, an average of $70 each. France comes next, with 4,000,000 depositors and is followed by Russia, Germany, Japan and many other countries. All this indicates industry, thrift and confidence.

A TREASURE SHIP.

How the Centurion Captured a Gold-Laden Spanish Vessel.

Of the many incidents of Anson's great voyage round the world in the middle of the eighteenth century, none has made a greater impression on the popular mind than the capture of the great treasure ship Nuestra Señora de Cabadonga, on April 20, 1743. In the first place, the value of the prize was enormous; in the second, the duel between the Centurion and the treasure ship was a fine single-ship action; and in the third place, the victory came at a time when Anson's fortunes seemed to be at a low ebb, when one disaster after another had reduced his squadron to one ship, and when sickness had reduced his gun's crews to two men each.

The Nuestra Señora de Cabadonga, or as it is also called, de Covadonga, was a treasure ship from Manila, commanded by Don Geronimo Montero, and laden with specie and merchandise. She was sighted at sunrise from the masthead of the Centurion, and Master Richard Walter, Anson's chaplain and historian, tells us that "a general joy spread through the whole ship." Galleons nearly always cruised in couples, and it was supposed another must be near. The Centurion at once stood toward the Spaniard, and before 8 o'clock her officers could see the enemy from the deck. The firing of a gun by the galleon was taken by Anson's men to be a consort to make haste and rejoin, and "to amuse the Dons" the Centurion herself fired a gun to leeward. But Don Geronimo Montero had no consort, nor did he understand the prowess of his opponent. The Spaniards knew they were face to face with Anson and the Centurion, and they were keen to fight. Throughout the forenoon the two ships crept closer and closer together, till by midday only a league separated them. Then the Nuestra Señora de Cabadonga brought to under topsails, with her head to the northward, and at the top-gallant masthead the standard of Spain was flying.

Anson was not slow to accept the challenge, and he laid his plans with great foresight. Into the tops he sent 30 picked men, the best small arms marksmen in the ship. His broadside guns were manned only with two men each, and to them he gave instructions to do nothing but load their gun. The rest of the men were divided into gangs of 12, with orders to move up and down the battery for the sole purpose of running out and firing the guns as they were loaded. It was an unconventional way of fighting, continuous independent fire was the last thing the Spaniards expected, and it threw them into as much confusion as did the disaster which overtook them within a few minutes of the opening of the fight. A mass of masts and hammocks in the netting of the galleon caught fire, burning fiercely and blazing up nearly as high as the mizen top. The two ships were practically within pistol shot, and the Centurion which started the blaze, threw herself from the danger and largely to clothe this nation, the man whose vital function it is to feed and largely to clothe this nation, the man whose combined product yield a greater annual value than our mines or forests or water powers, the man whose problems will be more than ever the nation's problems when the earth shall have been stripped of its coal and gold."

The fight raged in for two hours. Anson changing from round shot to grape in the second part of the engagement with deadly effect. The ships were so near that some of the Spanish officers were seen running about with much assiduity to prevent the desertion of their men from their quarters, but all their endeavors were in vain. After having as a last effort fired five or six guns "with more judgment than usual," they yielded up the contest; and the galleon's colors being burned off the ensign staff at the beginning of the engagement, she struck the standard at her main top-gallant masthead. The Centurion did not escape undamaged; at the moment the galleon struck Anson was informed quietly that his ship was on fire near the powder room. He received the news with apparent emotion, and taking care not to alarm his people, gave the necessary orders for extinguishing the fire.

The specie in the Nuestra Señora de Cabadonga included 1,313,843 pieces of eight, and 35,882 ounces of virgin silver, and the total value of the prize was assessed at $313,000. And in this connection it is interesting to note that two other Spanish treasure ships captured by English commanders bore names similar to that of Anson's prize. There was the Nuestra Señora del Rosarian, which Drake took, "and in it great booty," from that most haughty of Spanish seamen, Don Pedro Luis Remedios, which was taken very richly laden by the Royal Family privateer off Cape St. Mary's three years after Anson's great capture.—London Globe.

The man without a purpose is like Virtues of the Dog.

The dog is a noble animal, compared with man, because he never borrows your money to spend on midnight suppers for chorus girls, and because if he did he would pay you back, instead of black-guarding you to your friends for a skinflint.—New York Press.

Love Feast Ends Fight.

Differences existing between Colonel W. Bennett and Jasper Wylidng, which created such a sensation at Waycross, Ga., Friday, were amicably settled at a love feast of the members of the First Baptist church and the Central Baptist tabernacle. Apologies were extended and accepted and hand-shaking followed.

The one who is constantly doing little acts of kindness and love can always be depended upon to do great things when the emergency arises.

ATTENTION FARMERS

THE SOUTH ATLANTIC CORN EXPOSITION WILL BE

Held in Columbia, at Which Eight Thousand Dollars in Prizes Will Be Offered.

Eight thousand dollars will be offered in prizes for the best corn at the South Atlantic Corn Exposition held in Columbia December 5—8. The South Carolina Corn Breeders' Association, who have been promoting the exposition met in the State House Thursday and completed plans for the exposition. The organization was perfected and prominent farmers will act as superintendents in the various departments and promote the exhibition of corn from the in various districts of North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

Prizes were arranged for each county in South Carolina, for the congressional districts in South Carolina and for the three zones of each North Carolina and Georgia. Sweep-Stakes will be offered for the best 10 ears of yellow corn, prolific white corn, single ear variety white corn, single ear and bushel lots, from all the States. All these exhibits will come together in Grand Sweep-Stake and Grand Champion Sweep-Stake classes.

The largest prize has been offered for the best 10 ears of corn grown in any of the three States. The winner of the Grand Champion Sweep-Stake prize for 10 ears of corn will receive as his reward prizes approximating $400. This is intended to bring out the best corn that can be produced in the South Atlantic States and $400 for the best 10 ears will cause the farmers to put forth their very best efforts in making this exhibit the finest that can be secured.

It is said this exhibit will carry great honor with it for an exhibit of 10 ears of corn that are the best that can be grown by any one exhibitor in any of the three States of South Carolina, North Carolina and Georgia, will within itself be a prize worthy of the highest consideration. A separate department will be set apart for the Boys' Club and the boys' exhibits. These will have special prizes and will be under the direct supervision of the officers of the Farm Demonstration Work in South Carolina.

An important feature of the exposition will be the individual displays, there being prizes offered for the best individual display in each of the three States and also for the Grand Champion individual display. The one who wins the individual display in either of these States will receive prizes to the value of $250 and the one making the best display at the exposition will receive an additional prize of $50 in cash, thus, rewarding the exhibitor who makes the best display. In order to make this premium list as large as it is the South Carolina Legislature, last winter, enacted a bill providing $1000 in cash to be offered as prizes to the exhibitors of South Carolina alone. At the same time $500 was appropriated for the use of the Corn Breeders' Association in furthering its cause. Various machinery houses, fertilizer concerns, newspapers, and business enterprises have contributed large prizes. The International Harvester Co., alone has contributed approximately $600 and the John Deere Plow Co., has made liberal donations.

The South Carolina Cotton Seed Crushers' Association has also appropriated $300 in cash to be used for the best corn exhibits made from South Carolina. In the beginning it was intended to raise only $4,000 in prizes, together with the $1,000, appropriated by the State Legislature would make $5,000, but the enthusiasm in the exposition has been so widespread, the interest in corn growing in the South Atlantic States so great and the liberality of the varied interests of the South Atlantic States so marked that larger prizes have been secured until the total with aggregate $8,000 in machinery, fertilizer cash, etc. Work on the premium list has been completed, and it will come from the press in a few days and be ready for distribution.

At a meeting of the Corn Breeders' Association Thursday the following organization was completed:

- President and General Manager—A. D. Hudson, Newberry, S. C.
- Secretary and Treasurer—R. K. Hayes, Pages Mill, S. C.
- Superintendent of Entries—Malcolm Miller, Columbia, S. C.
- Superintendent of Judges—A. G. Smith, Columbia, S. C.
- Superintendent of Exhibits—A. D. Hudson, Newberry, S. C.
- Superintendent of Boys' Exhibits—L. L. Baker, Bishopville, S. C.
- Superintendent of Exhibits—first district, James Reeves, Turberville; Second District W. T. Walker, Blackville; Third District, W. C. Brown, Newberry; Fourth District, P. E. Bailey, Laurens; Fifth District, E. A. Brown, Camden; Sixth District, R. K. Hayes, Pages Mill; Seventh District, W. McD. Green, Oswego.
- Superintendent of North Carolina exhibits—W. J. McKinnon, Lylesland, S. C.
- Superintendent of Georgia exhibits—W. F. Cleveland, Ridgeland, S. C.
- Superintendent of Machinery—L. C. Chappell, Lylesland, S. C.
- Mr. Hamby, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, was also present at the meeting to arrange for the work of the Columbia Chamber of Commerce in connection with the exposition. Craven Hall has been secured and the Chamber of Commerce, through Mr. Hamby will look after the securing of the railroad rates, the decoration of the hall, the conducting of the Information Bu-

AGAIN THE FIRELESS COOKER.

The fireless cook stove, the old "hay box" of northern Europe, has established itself as one of the regular supplies of the house furnishing departments. It is a very different thing, however, from its ancient prototype. In its latest manifestation it looks like a shirtwaist box or book case, and is an ornament rather than otherwise to an apartment. In the former case it is a low chest and in the latter a tall case, with two deep drawers, which, upon drawing out, prove to be padded and fitted with cushions and utensils which exclude the air and retain the heat. Such boxes cost from $6 to $25. They are used by modern women, as they have always been by European peasants, who for one reason or another find it necessary to reduce the preparation of the family meal to the least possible expenditure of time and labor. Business women, farmers' wives and others who do their own cooking.

To cook beans in the hay box prepare them as for baking and pack them away while they are boiling. Leave them for eight hours or more and then, if they are wanted with a crust over the top, brown them in the oven.

For a pot roast, select a four or five-pound piece of rump steak and brown it in a frying pan in suet or drippings. Then put into the pot, cover with boiling water and boil for half an hour. At the end of that time pack the kettle away in the box for six hours. Just before serving remove the meat and thicken and season the gravy.

Old-fashioned rice pudding can be made in the hay box. Wash a third of a cupful of rice, and put it into a pan with a quart of milk, a third of a cupful of sugar, a spoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of butter and a bit of grated lemon rind. Bring the milk to scalding point over hot water and cook there for 15 minutes. Then pack away in the hay box for five hours. The idea in cooking the food for some time over the stove is to heat it thoroughly. There can, of course, be no more heat after it is packed away than it takes into the box, and all the heat possible is wanted.

Helps in the Sewing Room.

One of the nicest darning balls you could use is an electric light bulb which has had the sharp point knocked off. It is light in color and one can see the work more easily, and it is light in weight.

Remember the truth of the old saying, "a stitch in time saves nine," and mend any worn places or torn parts in all garments before sending them to the laundry, and the time added to the life of the garments will more than repay you. What is only a small hole in a garment before it is sent to the laundry oftentimes will be a fair sized rent when it returns.

It is essential that all linens for wearing apparel should be shrunken before being cut. It is well to send it to the firm from which it was purchased, for the work will be thoroughly done and the expense will be small. The new look will remain, as it will not be shrunken by an amateur.

Get Rid of Mold.

Get a magnifying glass and look at the mold of one day's growth on a piece of bread and you will see a plant bearing leaves, flowers and seeds, increasing with incredible rapidity; for in a few hours the seeds spring up, arrive at maturity, and bring forth seeds themselves, so that many generations are produced in one day, necessitating immediate attention to prevent mold on food in pantries, closets, etc.

reau for the benefit of the visitors and will look after the printing of the tickets and the caring of the gate receipts.

In connection with the exposition there will be a corn judging contest and an institute program upon which there will be some of the best speakers in the country upon agricultural subjects. These will be under the direction of the Extension Department of Clemson College.

So enthusiastic and so confident were the members of the Corn Breeders' Association and the exposition officials of the success of the exposition, plans are already set on foot to make the exposition a permanent affair. Messrs. A. D. Hudson, R. K. Hayes, L. L. Baker, E. J. Watson, D. N. Barrow, W. R. Perkins, Ira W. Williams, A. G. Smith and J. N. Harper were appointed as a committee to draw up plans for forming a permanent organization. This committee will report at the next meeting of the Corn Breeders' Association and provide for holding an exposition annually.

The committee was also instructed to confer with representatives from all the Southern States looking to the organization of an Interstate Corn Exposition that would serve as a climax for the various expositions. Plans were also made for carrying on of the work of the Corn Breeders' Association this fall and next year. The Columbia State has offered $1,000 in prizes for the best corn breeding done in South Carolina; $500 to become available in 1911, and $500 in 1912. It was arranged so that anyone wishing to compete for this prize could secure the assistance of the Farm Demonstration Agent in his county or the adjoining county, and then next year carry on the work under the direction of the Special representative of the Corn Breeders' Association.

Every member was very enthusiastic over the outlook of the exposition, and judging from the premium list, the co-operation of the farmers and interest manifested Thursday, it will not only be the first corn exposition ever held in the South, but one of the greatest educational meetings ever held for the benefit of the Southern farmers.

HUGE CORN CROP

RAISED BY CAPT. J. W. BUNCH AT THE ASYLUM FARM.

Will Gather an Average of One Hundred Bushels Per Acre on One Hundred Acres.

The Columbia Record of Thursday tells of a wonderful corn crop made by Capt. J. W. Bunch on the farm of the State Asylum in Columbia. Here are the facts as given by the Record:

Capt. J. W. Bunch has grown on the farm of the State Hospital for the Insane a 100-acre crop of corn that will easily run 100 bushels to the acre—and this within ten minutes' walk of the State capitol. No fancy figuring is required to arrive at this estimate of the yield. So many tests have been made and these have been so distributed over the fields as to indicate on their face a production considerably in excess of the amount mentioned; but Capt. Bunch prefers to err on the side of conservatism and says: "Let it stand 100 bushels; at that, it is probably the best corn crop in South Carolina."

And the value and interest of Capt. Bunch's exemplification of the gentle art of corn culture is the greater for the reason that it is on a large scale. Capt. Bunch has not taken a select acre, of special fertility, spent money extravagantly upon artificial manures and endeavored to force a prize yield without reference to the cost per bushel of the product. Such examples have little practical value as contributions to the sum of agricultural knowledge. Capt. Bunch has taken a problem such as every farmer faces; he has had in mind, just as the private planter has, the showing of a balance on the right side of the ledger at harvest time, and he has worked it out with just labor, tools, machinery, seed and fertilizer as the average farmer planting on this scale has.

It may be urged that the lands Capt. Bunch used as in fine tilth, rich, well drained and in good mechanical condition. This may be sufficiently answered by saying that when Capt. Bunch took charge of these lands they were considered of low value for agricultural purposes—typical Richland sand, with a clay subsoil, their fertility low and considerable tracts swampy. If now they are among the most productive lands in the South, rich and well drained, it is simply because they have been well used. Capt. Bunch has mixed brains with his fertilizer—and his knowledge of farming was not acquired in college either. He is no mere dabbler in agriculture. Last year he made this farm, with its 250 acres under cultivation, yield $20,000.

"Capt. Bunch, you do not let your land rest even at night," visitors have frequently said, after an inspection of the farm. It is true that every acre is required to yield its maximum and that constantly, but then Capt. Bunch for his part plays fair with his soil. Crop-making constituents taken from it this year are faithfully returned to it the next.

Stable manure produced on the place goes back into the soil. The necessity of humus is never forgotten. The variety of crops grown is not sufficient to permit of a four-crop rotation, but two exhausting crops are never required of the same tract in succession. The swampy low grounds are tile drained. The asylum farms get a square deal and responds with bumper crops. It has enjoyed Capt. Bunch's equal give-and-take policy for 20 years and the result is that it is a farm which gladdens the heart of any man who ever loved the soil.

Capt. Bunch does not follow the Williamson method of corn-growing. "I would not be understood as condemning it, though," he said Thursday. "For the lands on which it was originated, level, sandy, Pee Dee soils, it is, I believe, the best system; but to use it would be a mistake on lands of such tilth as these here. We tried it and found that on our farm it caused a decrease of 25 to 35 bushels per acre below the normal yield."

It is figured that the ear corn harvested from corn tracts on the asylum farm is clear profit, the expense being met by the fodder, and stalks and the ensilage yielded by grass and the peas broadcasted through the crop. The bulk of the corn crop this season is of the Mariborough stock. Experiments with the Balts corn have been disappointing. This is the seed with which Mr. Batts of Raleigh is said to have secured a prize-acre yield of 226 bushels per acre last year.

Haskell Snubs Teddy.

Governor Haskell, who quarrel with Theodore Roosevelt is of long standing, has beaten the president to it for once. In a sarcastic letter, he declined an invitation to deliver a speech at the Arkansas state fair, October 10, giving as his reason that Roosevelt will be there. He declared that he would not sit on the same platform with Roosevelt.

Offers Big Reward.

More than a quarter of a million dollars in reward will be offered for the arrest of the dynamiters of The Times building, when more than a score were killed. Merchants of Los Angeles will post a reward of $250,000, according to plans under way, while $18,500 already has been offered.

Damage to Crop.

Floods caused by the rains of the last two days have damaged the cotton to the extent of nearly $1,000,000 in the Mississippi Valley. Efforts are being made to drain the plantations and prevent further damage.

TYPHOON SWEEPS ISLANDS.

Thousands of People Are Homeless And the Crops Much Damaged.

At Manila, P. I., a typhoon of unusual severity swept over the valley of the Cayanag river in the provinces of Cayanag and Isabella, northern Luzon, on September 24. Four towns, including Ilagan, the capital of Isabella province, were practically demolished. A thousand persons are still homeless and destitute, but the dispatches so far received indicate that there were no casualties. The tobacco crop was seriously damaged. The government is making relief plans.
