

SOME FACTS ABOUT POTASH

- 1st. We know theoretically and practically that Potash in an available form is necessary to make a successful crop.
- 2nd. We are sure that the heavy rains during the past winter have leached out a great amount of soluble Potash and left the soil lacking in this valuable food.
- 3rd. Germany, our only source of supply, has prohibited any further exports of Potash Salts.
- 4th. Muriate of Potash is selling this season for about $125 to $150 per ton, cash in large lots, port. Last season it was about $40 per ton.
- 5th. This is an increase of from $1.50 to $2.00 per unit. We have increased our price in mixed goods for Potash only 50c. per unit over last season's prices.

- 6th. Our average increased price of fertilizer, due to the increased cost of Potash is only about 10c. per sack. Please note the following table:

200 lbs. Fertilizer per acre—Cost of Potash 10c. more than last year.
300 lbs. Fertilizer per acre—Cost of Potash 15c. more than last year.
400 lbs. Fertilizer per acre—Cost of Potash 20c. more than last year.
500 lbs. Fertilizer per acre—Cost of Potash 25c. more than last year.

- 7th. After considering the above facts, we feel sure you will not undertake to make a crop this season without AN ADEQUATE SUPPLY OF POTASH IN YOUR FERTILIZERS. WE HAVE THE GOODS and our prices are very little higher than last season.

A GROCER ADVERTISED.

Attributes All of His Success to Intelligent Use of Printer's Ink.

Duke C. Bowers, of Memphis, Tennessee, has 43 grocery stores in that city and sells nearly half of the groceries consumed there. Sixteen years ago he was piling staves in a Kentucky barrel factory at $3 per day and while working at that job concluded to go into business for himself. A friend loaned him $600 and he opened a cash grocery. His sales the first day amounted to eight cents. Now he is rated in the millionaire class. Andrew L. Deming quotes Mr. Bowers in the St. Louis Republic as follows:

"If I had not discovered newspaper advertising, I would still be struggling for a living in that first store instead of having forty-three. A few months after I opened my cash grocery in Columbus, Ky., Charles N. Walker, who used to edit the paper there, showed me it would be to my advantage to take a half page ad every week, changing the ad every issue. Common sense told me there was no use running a business that would save the people unless you told them so, so I signed a six months contract. It pulled, so well in fact that I used to buy 200 extra copies and mail them out over Carlisle county, to see if I couldn't get the farmers to come to Columbus to trade.

Pretty soon I became the biggest advertiser that Walker had. Half pages became too small for me. I began to use pages. And business picked up accordingly. Seeing the success possible in a cash business pushed by good advertising, I sold out to go where I could get the greatest results for my efforts. Just before starting for Memphis, an uncle of mine called me out for a private talk. "Duke," he said, "you're not going to Memphis sure enough, are you? "That's what I am going to do," I replied, "I'm going down there and go into the grocery business right away." He shook his head sorrowful-like and said, "Duke, those newspapers will get all the money you have got. Charlie Walker has been making more money out of your business than you have." "Well, the newspapers have gotten a lot out of me, but my greatest regret is that I didn't let them have more." "Then you believe in advertising?" Mr. Bowers was asked.

"I am not merely a believer in advertising," was the prompt rejoinder, "I am almost a maniac on the subject. I firmly believe if I had only spent half so much for advertising as I have spent, I wouldn't be worth half so much as I am worth. Furthermore, I am convinced that if I had been foresighted enough to spend twice as much for advertising as I have spent, that I would be worth twice what I am worth."—Ex.

Hard on Circuses.

The European war has cut off the main source upon which zoological parks and circuses depend for their supply of wild animals. The Hagenback brothers, the sons of Carl Hagenback, are penned up in Germany and are unable to send expeditions into the wilds or to ship animals abroad.

The Hagenbacks have had an animal trust which no one up to the present time has had sufficient experience or capital to break, but now London capitalists have formed a concern, the Wild Animal Supply company, which will attempt to take the world market from the Hagenbacks during the war.

Curator Hornaday at the Bronx Zoo, has already received offers from the new concern to supply him with animals, but the Bronx Zoo is in good condition to run along two or three years yet without increasing its present supply.—New York Sun.

Mark Twain's Dark Hour.

Mark Twain and Chauncey Depew once went abroad on the same ship. When the ship was a few days out they both were invited to a dinner, says the Kansas City Times. Speech-making time came. Mark Twain had the first chance. He spoke twenty minutes and made a great hit. Then it was Depew's turn.

"Mr. Toastmaster and ladies and gentlemen," said the famous raconteur, as he arose, "before this dinner Mark Twain and myself made an agreement to trade speeches. He has just delivered my speech, and I thank you for the pleasant manner in which you received it. I regret to say that I have lost the notes of his speech and cannot remember anything he was to say."

Then he sat down. There was much laughter. Next day an Englishman who had been in the party came across Mark Twain in the smoking room. "Mr. Clemens," he said, "I consider you were much imposed upon last night. I have heard that Mr. Depew is a clever man, but really that speech you made of his last night struck me as being the most infernal rot."
