RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT UPON DEATH OF R C BROWNLEE

At the annual meeting of the Stockholders of the Mills Manufacturing Co., Oct. 20, 1915, the following resolution was offered and adopted relative to the memory of Mr. R. C. Brownlee, a Director, who died June 23rd, 1915.

Whereas, God in His inscrutable Providence has removed from our midst Mr. R. C. Brownlee, who has been a Director in this Mill since May 3rd, 1898, and a strong supporter and wise counsellor up to the time of his death.

Whereas, It was our privilege to be associated with him and thereby knew his untiring and devoted interest therein and the value of his wise counsel, and desiring to give expression to our sorrow and the great loss we have suffered, Now, Therefore, be it Resolved, that in the death of Mr. R. C. Brownlee, the Mills Manufacturing Co., and the State of South Carolina have lost a valuable citizen and efficient and faithful friend, whose wise counsel and genial disposition will be a great loss to all.

Resolved, That a page in our minute book be dedicated to his memory and that a copy of these Resolutions be sent to his family and also published in the Daily papers.

CONTROL ROOT-KNOT NOW.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 23.—The root-knot disease of cotton and other crops has been causing unusually heavy losses in the South this season, much of which could have been prevented, and the infestation will be carried over to next season unless control measures are adopted.

The Department of Agriculture states that this pest, which is one of the most dangerous in the list, can be controlled by crop rotation, and that a beginning should be made this fall, by sowing winter rye, on infested fields.

An Insidious Disease.
 Many farmers who have attributed their meager harvests to bad weather, lack of fertilizer or poor soil, may find, on examining the roots, that they are covered with swellings or galls of varying sizes, caused by the minute eelworms or nematodes that are becoming so common in sandy soil. These little parasites are frequently introduced on plants of figs, peaches, grapes, etc., or on soil from infested fields, and multiply rapidly on a great variety of crops. Severely diseased plants either die or are distinctly stunted with a sickly, yellowish green color on both leaves and stems.

Control By Starving Out.

The most satisfactory method of controlling root-knot of cotton and other field crops is one in which infested fields can be planted for a period of years to crops resistant to the disease, and, at the same time, kept free of all susceptible weeds. In this way the number of nematodes can be greatly reduced, if not eliminated; for it has been found that they entirely succumb within two years when the soil is kept free from the kinds of vegetables on which they live.

The farmer may choose from the following list of crops immune or resistant to root-knot those best suited to his needs; barley, beggarweed, Brabham cowpea, broom-corn millet, corn, crab grass, Iron cowpea, peanut, pearl millet, rye, sorghum, velvet wheat and winter oats. The above are safe on infested land, but the following crops susceptible to root-knot must be avoided; alfalfa, asparagus, beans, beets, canteloupes, celery, clover, cotton, cowpeas, (all except Iron and Brabham), cucumbers, figs, Irish potatoes, mulberries, okra, peaches, soy beans, sugar cane, sweet potatoes, tobacco, tomatoes, vetch and watermelons.

In addition to these plants, most common weeds are attacked by the nematodes, and, if for no other reason, should therefore be kept from fields in which it is desired to eliminate eelworms.

AT THE FAIR

Old Jenkins has a Jersey cow,
 An' she's as fine as silk,
 She simply breaks the record when
 It comes to givin' milk;
 An' as for butter, sakes o' lives!
 Her match ain't anywhere,
 But what's the use of telling this,
 You'll see her at the fair.

Old neighbor Dobbins has a sow
 As fine as fine can be,
 They say she weighs a thousand pounds,
 An' has a pedigree.
 She has a dozen baby pigs,
 Plum beauties, I declare!
 But what's the use of telling this,
 You'll see them at the fair.

Old Andy Jones, the chicken man,
 That lives across the way,
 He has a hen that takes the cake

For layin' twice a day.
 At least that's what old Andy says,
 An' Andy wouldn't dare
 To lie about his hen, 'cause
 He'll have her at the fair.

Old Farmer Brown has raised some corn
 That knocks the record flat,
 The ears are twenty inches long.
 Well—maybe—hardly that.
 But anyway, there ain't no corn
 Can beat it, anywhere,
 But what's the use of tellin' this,
 You'll see it at the fair.

"COTTON-TOTS" AS GAMBLERS

The Manufacturers Record.
 Cotton growing as the chief industry of the South is as unsafe, compared with general diversified agriculture, as is speculating in Wall Street as compared with the legitimate business interests of the country.

A few men may grow rich on Wall Street speculation, but the majority who plunge on Wall Street sooner or later plunge downward.

The bankers and the brokers are the middlemen who take the toll and reap the harvest, making their profit on the buyer and the seller of Wall Street securities.

The man who buys through a Wall Street broker pays his toll or commission, and, perchance, he sells on the same day or the next day, and pays another toll or commission, and the banker or the broker wins on both sides, whether the speculator loses or wins.

The same condition applies to the South in cotton. The all-cotton grower, or the "cotton-tot," pays a toll to the fertilizer man, to the money-lender, to the merchant—on everything he buys or borrows—and then when he sells his product, whether he makes or loses, he pays a toll for the handling of it, and the middlemen win in both cases.

And the middlemen are entitled to win in both cases so long as the speculator takes his chances in Wall Street and so long as the "cotton-tot" takes his chances in speculating in cotton growing, and when the latter concentrates his attention on cotton to the exclusion of foodstuffs he is as much a speculative plunger as the wilder gambler in Wall Street.

EXPORTS OF BREADSTUFFS AND MINERALS FROM THE SOUTH

The Manufacturers Record.

Of the total value of breadstuffs exported from the United States during August, $29,396,900, the amount sent out from the South was $12,395,000, or over 42 per cent. Omitting New Work from the total, the South's proportion would be largely more than one-half of the balance.

Of the total exports of mineral oils for August, amounting to 232,334,000 gallons, there was exported from New Orleans 20,414,000 gallons and from Sabine 60,018,000 gallons, or a total from these two ports of 80,432,000 gallons. Comparatively little was exported from other Southern ports. New York exported 81,609,000 gallons, Philadelphia 23,863,000 gallons and San Francisco 29,059,000 gallons. New Orleans and Sabine (the latter including Beaumont and Port Arthur) two customs districts, where the oil business has been developed within very recent years exported just a little less than New York, which has been the center of the oil-refining and oil-shipping industry for a great many years.

In breadstuffs and in mineral oil the South, indicated by these figures, is beginning to assume its rightful position in our foreign commerce.

BARBARA WORTH.

"The Winning of Barbara Worth" is going to attract a big crowd to the Grand Opera House on Tuesday, Nov. 2. It is in the air. People know that the book from which the play is taken is one of the best ever written. They know that Harold Bell Wright stands for all that is good, thoroughly American without making its characters the milk-and-water sort "The Winning of Barbara Worth" breathes the air of mountain and plain. The characters are true to life. There is dash, snap, comedy and sensation in every moment of Mark E. Swan's wonderful dramatization. There is a splendid, life-like scenic display. The thorough advertising methods have convinced the public that they are going to get full value for their money. Manager Goldstein has satisfied himself that the play, company and production is all that is claimed for it, and offers the attraction, confident that it will prove to be one of the best, if not the best of the season.
