PHILSON AND HENRY

ALL ABOUT GUNS.

The commonest injuries produced in war are gunshot wounds. Until 50 years ago a soldier's musket carried only about 835 feet; and this degree of efficiency had not been exceeded for more than 200 years, i. e., from 1640 to 1859. In other words, the wars of Louis XIV, the struggles of the French Revolution, the Napoleonic wars, the Crimean war and our war of 1812 were all fought with firearms which had no effect at a distance greater than 835 feet. In 1857, however, the smooth bore gun barrel was replaced by the rifled barrel, and this change caused an immediate increase in the carrying distance to 2,000 feet. At the time this result seemed to the whole world nothing short of a miracle; but as early as 1866, a French officer, Chassepot by name, invented a rifle having a calibre of 15 millimeters, which carried 4,000 feet. Ten years before, this accomplishment would have seemed quite impossible. On Nov. 4, 1867, the new Chassepot rifle was submitted to a practical test. The French sent a detachment of men to occupy Rome and to hold it against the advancement of Garibaldi. The effect of the new rifle in the engagements was so remarkable that the entire French army was immediately equipped with Chassepot.

The Chassepot rifle weighed nine pounds, and the Gras rifle, which was introduced in 1874, weighed nearly as much, but it had a carrying distance of 6,000 feet. After remaining the same for 217 years, the carrying distance of firearms was thus increased in 15 years by 5,165 feet. At the same time the firearms of the Austrians, Prussians and Italians were also greatly improved, and a repeating rifle, firing 16 shots a minute, and having a carrying distance of 9,000 feet, came into practical use.

The rifles in use today are much lighter, are more easily handled and carry a distance of more than 12,000 feet at the rate of 2,700 feet per second. The revolver was first introduced in 1850; since then it has also undergone great improvement. Its carrying distance, which at first was only about 100 feet, was increased to 330 feet, then 680, and finally 4,000 feet.

In comparison with such means of defense and offense, it is interesting to call to mind the weapons of the ancients. A javelin could be thrown about 84 feet; the sling ordinarily hurled its missile 266 feet, the Balaric sling-men being famous, however, because they could hurl a stone 333 feet. The wooden bow was in use until the middle of the 15th century; by means of it an arrow would be propelled a distance of 265-330 feet, while the steel crossbow, which came into use later, carried from 330-340 feet. The old blunderbuss of the Pilgrims, which was supported on a fork, was effective for about 500 feet. The early musket carried about 600 feet. This firearm was much improved, so that it could shoot a distance of 835 feet, and this was the best the world knew until 1857.

LONG WORDS.

What is the longest English word? Some time ago the London Academy published a list of words of Gargantuan dimensions, with their authorities and instances of actual usage. Among other words which figure in the list are velocipedistrianistical-inarianologist, ultradisestablishmentarianist, antidisestablishmentarian, ultrantidisestablishmentarianists, antitransubstantiationistically, focipacuinihilipification (used by Sir Walter Scott in his journal), and honorificabilitudinitatibus (used by Shakespeare and several others). Certain trifles such as incircumscribibility do not count, and the big word of Rabalais, antipericametnarbeugedamphicribrationis is apparently ruled out, for the Academy says: "The Englishman's real jaw-breaker is a Welsh word over which Mr. Justice Lawrence once, at the Anglesey Assizes, asked an explanation from Mr. Bryn Roberts, M. P. What is the meaning of the letters 'p g' after the name Llanfair?" The answer was. It is an abbreviation for the village of Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllandysillgogoch. How is this pronounced? It will take some beating. This word of fifty-four letters, if repeated often enough is said to be a cure for the toothache.—Linotype Bulletin.
