ABBEVILLE TAKES ACTION.

(The State)
Of special significance is the following one of the resolutions passed by a mass meeting of the citizens of Abbeville:

"Resolved further, That if it be necessary to carry out this determination the aid of the State and federal government be called for in order that every citizen may enjoy his rights under the constitution."

For citizens of South Carolina to suggest that the aid of the "federal government" be invoked in order that all citizens shall be protected in the enjoyment of their rights is not usual. It hints a great deal more than the words literally mean.

People who think at all are beginning to understand that if this State is to be habitable good order must be preserved and property must be protected. If the lives and property of negroes in Abbeville may be taken at the pleasure of a mob, the lives and property of white men who happen not to be in sympathy with the acts of the mob are scarcely in less danger. When a negro is lynched in Abbeville or elsewhere the white man who dares to raise his voice against the proceeding may be shot, beaten, or lynched, too.

In not one lynching in a hundred, people or perhaps even a majority of the people of the community approvers of it but this law respecting part of the community are not as a rule armed. They are not seeking trouble. All they wish is that they be allowed to go about their business and that the community be safe from disturbance. They are entirely content that the processes of the law be carried out and they know full well that the laws are ample to protect society. No man of sense believes that in any case conditions are bettered by a lynching but when the mob has once started, when mischief is afoot, the orderly and peaceful are practically as helpless to resist as the victim. Let one remonstrate and, the mob being for the time supreme, that one is denounced as a "nigger lover" and is subjected to insult if not violence for his pains.

The action of the citizens of Abbeville makes plain that they are aroused. They do not intend to allow law to be prostrated in Abbeville, with the result that industry will come to an end and property values be destroyed. If the choice be between mob law and federal law, they will lay aside the traditional objections entertained by Southern whites towards interference by federal authority and welcome its assistance. Moreover, it is scarcely to be doubted that this is a condition of mind that is found among the people of other communities than Abbeville.

TRUE MEN OF ABBEVILLE.

Those citizens of Abbeville who have undertaken to rid their county of the disgrace and shame that have come through the murder of a negro, in broad daylight, at the hands of a mob of irresponsibles, have contracted for a big job. It may not be possible ever to convict one of the murderers, for mistrials are all too easy, but an effort will at least determine that lawbreakers must pay the costs of court trials. This will act as a deterrent, and public sentiment may so change that convictions might be secured.—The Columbia Record.

OVER A MILLION THANKS—GIVING TURKEYS FROM TEXAS

The increasing importance of Texas as a turkey-producing State is indicated by the fact that plans are now under way by the Texas Poultry and Butter Shippers' Association for the shipping of 1,200,000 turkeys out of Texas to Northern and Eastern markets this fall.

In the few weeks preceding Thanksgiving there are regular "turkey trots" or "round-ups" in several of the interior cities, notably Temple and Cuero, at which time turkeys by the thousand are driven into town to be dressed and shipped out in carload lots. During that time the turkey industry is the principal feature of community activity, and the spectacle is one which even attracts outsiders for the novelty of the spectacle.—Manufacturers Record.
