SUGGESTIONS FOR THE RELIEF OF THE IRISH POTATO SITU-ATION IN THE SOUTH.

As the season approaches for the more and more evident that if this Southern crop the markets are supcrop is marketed as in previous plied from the North. years it will probably result in financial loss to the grower. The holdings of old potatoes in the North are generally conceded to be largely in excess of the normal requirements of the consumer and as a reprices of stock have very materially dities. declined and are likely to continue to drop if any considerable portion of the crop is marketed. In many sections of the country, and from Michigan west, the producer is forced to sell his crop at from 35 to 75 cents for cwt. for U. S. Grade No. 1 potatoes and in sections west of the Mississippi this means sacks included.

of supply and demand coupled with time and saving transportation. low prices at which table stock is moving to market, the following suggestions are recommended for consideration.

1. Delay harvesting potatoes intended for the Northern and Western amrkets, insofar as it is possible FOR SALE-One new Ford Sedan until they are fairly well matured. This in itself will delay harvesting two or three weeks and the matured potatoes will keep much longer than immature ones.

2. It is possible successfully to hold a portion of the crop in suitable storage for some time if it is allowed to mature before harvesting and all unsound or badly cut tubers are removed. The best type of storage is found in artificially refrigerated cold storage plants but 5-7-tf. such storage is limited. It is believed that if care is exercised the newly dug crop of Irish potatoes can be successfully stored in an up-to-date sweet potato curing house, provided when the nights are cool and closing early in the morning. As a matter of fact, well ripened stock if dug in the early evening and gathered early next morning when cool and immediately placed in suitable storage may be satisfactorily held for a month or two or possibly more STRAYED-Off on Monday, one In cold storage plants where a temperature of from 37 degrees to 40 degrees F. can be maintained, they may be kept for several months without undue shrinkage.

. 3. The people of the South should give the Irish potato a more prominent place in the diet, thereby increasing the home consumption of the crop, relieving the transportation facilities and saving wheat for the Allies. Under normal conditions the South consumes more potatoes than harvesting of the Southern crop of it produces, but except for a few early Irish potatoes, it becomes weeks during the harvesting of the

It is not good business to sell the whole Southern crop to Northern markets and then in a short time be dependent on the North for potatoes

The more you consume of your own crop the greater the saving of sult of this over-supply the present transport service for other commo-
