

JOSEPH NORTH ALSTON

McCormick, August 8.—The death of Joseph North Alston on August 2, has already been chronicled, but something more is due the memory of so worthy a gentleman and excellent citizen. He was an all-round Carolinian, having been born in Georgetown and spending the latter years of his life hereabout, where he married, and reared two children. His father, Capt. Joseph Byth Alston, a gallant Confederate of the Twenty-Seventh South Carolina Regiment was captured and while a prisoner at Fort Delaware wrote "Stack Arms", perhaps the most beautiful of his poems. The soldier-poet married Miss Mary North, a niece of his friend and preceptor, James L. Petigru, and died at "Badwell", the historic home of the great lawyer, in March, 1904. Mr. Alston was only a child when his father moved to Baltimore, where he was educated at the City College and became a civil engineer. He was highly successful in his profession in West Virginia and Ohio, and notably at Louisville, Ky., where at the age of 21 he was in charge of important government work. Because of his father's failing health he returned in 1895 to South Carolina, taking charge of "Badwell", the family homestead. In 1900 he married Miss Augusta McIntosh, who died in 1913, leaving two children, John North, now a very promising student at the University of South Carolina, and Mary Louise Alston. In 1913 he married Miss Mary Briff, of McCormick, who died last year.

Mr. Alston was a man of spotless character, keen intelligence, and winning, courteous address. He died last Saturday, after a long and painful illness, which he bore, as might be expected, with great fortitude.

As I was As I am

Mr. A. N. Sparr of 446 Magnolia Street, Jacksonville, Fla., says: "The 'Flu' left me in a very weak, run-down condition. I was so nervous that my hands shook like an old man with the palsy. My kidneys were in bad shape, and my liver sluggish. My food digested very poorly, and I often had cramps in my stomach, and was bloated with gas. I took a bottle of DRECO, and it went right after my troubles quick. My nerves are now steady and my sleep sound. Pains all gone over my kidneys and stomach, and liver acting fine!"

P. B. SPEED, Druggist

DRECO
made me well.
