Dr. Cody Finds Work for Baptists.

Dr. Z. T. Cody, editor of the Baptist Courier, returned to Greenville yesterday from a four-months visit to Europe, where as a member of a special mission of the Southern Baptist Convention, he made an inspection tour in the interest of proposed reconstruction work of the Baptist denomination in war ridden countries and devastated sections of the Old World.

In speaking of the tour made by the mission yesterday Dr. Cody said that it was a pronounced success and had accomplished all that was outlined for it to accomplish. The trip was not a pleasure trip Dr. Cody declared and wholly of a business nature for the denomination.

The countries visited by Dr. Cody and other members of the mission were England, Scotland, France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Egypt, and Palestine. In making the homeward trip from Palestine the mission came back through Italy, France and England. One whole month, Dr. Cody said, was spent in Italy.

In reviewing conditions in a general way as the mission found them Dr. Cody said that there was unlimited opportunity for service in all the countries visited particularly in France and Palestine. In France, he said, some of the conditions found were almost indescribable and there is real opportunity there for real, practical charitable help. In Palestine however, the conditions were found to be much worse, the majority of the people having been found to live in poverty and misery. In Palestine the problem will be largely one for the government to solve, he said, with the possibility that the Baptist denomination may greatly assist in orphanage work. In Italy the conditions were not found to be so bad but there is opportunity in that country, Dr. Cody said, for orphanage work. In Egypt Dr. Cody said, there is nothing needed. Egypt, he said, is wonderfully rich and is easily one of the most prosperous countries in the world.

COL. ROCHE AT HOME.

Col. Patrick Roche says he is at home, and desires us to say so in these columns. "The Press and Banner must be the most read paper in the United States and South America," he said, when telling us that he came up town Saturday afternoon only to collared by every white man and several colored ones, and forced to explain that he was not in Cuba, with his reasons for not going and all other circumstances connected with the enterprise, all of which took up so much time that he didn't get down to Hillbilly Headquarters in time to play even one game.

It all happened because it was stated in these columns that Col. Roche had accompanied Col. W. A. Calvert and Col. Jim Gilliam on the trip to the island, which we remember to have heard described a good many years ago as "a jewel racked by the waters of the silvery sea." Col. Roche had intended to go along with the other Colonels, but he thought the trip would cost about twenty-five dollars, he said. When he saw Col. Calvert count out a little less than five hundred and Col. Gilliam about the same amount, the morning of their departure, he changed his mind, not that he did not have the money, but he had not finished paying the high taxes now levied in this city and was owing the preacher a little balance. So he decided to stay behind and see these matters straightened out. He told us Saturday night, however, when it got cold that he knew Col. Calvert and Gilliam were having "pleasant sailing" down around Havana and he wouldn't mind if he were there.

The Colonel tells us that Jim McMillan was to go on the trip too, but that Jim fell out at the last minute. He objected to sending his picture to Washington to have it compared with all the hunted criminals, I. W. W.'s, presidential candidates, democrats and other culprits now being looked for, and as he could not get out of the United States and Florida in any other way, he decided to stay at Dyson and make bricks.

Col. Roche was on hand Tuesday to see his old friends Calvert and Gilliam off and to wish them a pleasant voyage and a very early return. He says that Col. Calvert was elected Treasurer of the expedition, the agreement being to make it a fifty-fifty affair all the way through; that Col. Calvert's money was to be spent first, and when it was out, they were to know that the trip is half over; they would then stay as many days in Cuba as they had been there already, then commence the homeward journey. As Colonel Gilliam did not expect to use his money for some days yet he decided to make it safe, so he went down to the store of Ramey & Gilliam, where they have new goods and low prices, and there secured the services of Col. Lamar Gilliam in sewing the money in his left hand hip pocket so it would not be lost before the time for using it arrived.

Col. Roche is fully persuaded that the Mayor of Havana has not seen a more prominent pair of men in his city in several years than his two friends. His only disquietude on the expedition is caused by his fears that the Mayor might think they had come down to buy up the city and profiteer on it and in order to get them out of any trouble on this score Col. Roche tells us that he gave them a recommendation of which the following is a copy:

Abbeville, S. C., Jan. 25, 1920.

Mayor of Havana,
Havana, Cuba,

Dear Mayor,—Should these two gentlemen get arrested in your city as profiteers, I will take it as a personal favor if you will let them loose. They do not mean any harm at all. They are two rich old business men from this place who have worked hard and made a good deal of money and who desire to travel a little. If you will show them where the fine cigars and good eating are to be found, with a little to wash it down, I think they will soon spend their money and come back home. Any courtesies extended them will be appreciated by

Your humble servant,
Patrick Roche.

P. S.—If you want to send me anything by these gentlemen it will be perfectly safe to do so if you will seal it well and lock the seal.

P. R.

The Best of Good Pictures

A. R. P. Church Society.

The Ladies Society of the Associate Reformed Church will meet with Mrs. Foster McLane Thursday afternoon at four o'clock.

There are no street cars, automobiles or other vehicles in Venice—not a hoof or a wheel to be seen from one end of the city to the other. This restriction of transport methods has prevented Venice from changing with the centuries.

ways some compensation in missing a big trip like this. He had just heard, when he was talking to us, that Col. Thomas Thomson had decided to see Mrs. Taggart at the Eureka at the first favorable opportunity, and arrange to have the Hillbillies with him at a dinner at that fine hotel, which continues to grow in public favor. "It would never do for me not to be here when Tommie gives his dinner," the Colonel told us, "He would never get over it." But it would help me to stand the vacation while partners Calvert and Gilliam are gone if some other kindly disposed gentleman, or gentlemen, would follow suit. "Never falter in well-doing."
