MIDWAY.

Editor Press and Banner:—As I am a new comer in these diggings I scarcely know who's who. I do know one thing, that is I'm living just half way between Donalds and Due West. The former noted for its Railroad facilities the latter for its Educational advantages. I may be short of news for a while. Now Mr. Editor, I want to tell you about some things I've seen and some I haven't seen. From the looks of the landscape in these diggings, people white and black, planted cotton last year and I'm afraid they are planning to let history repeat itself once more. If we had to live on what was made in these diggings last year for twelve months we would become cannibals. I have not seen enough wheat and oats in these diggings to fatten Job's Turkey. Now Mr. Editor, what will become of us when Mr. Editor takes our cotton away from us? We won't have any corn, wheat or oats to live on and no high priced cotton to buy something, Mr. Wéevil can't eat. So I guess we will feast on weevils for awhile. There is no excuse or reason for our farmers buying corn grown in Illinois, hay in Kentucky, flour in Virginia and meat in Tennessee. To me that's the answer to the H. C. L. question. The man on the farm can raise everything he or any other animal eats, then cotton as a surplus or money crop and it will be a money crop then and not sooner. Real estate is becoming restless in these diggings again. I look for some transfers before many crops are made.

Mr. Frank McGee is preparing to re-cover his dwelling and barns, improving his place in general. Mrs. Paul Haddon has been visiting her parents in Due West for a few days. Mr. Haddon is moving on with the Dairy business. Mr. Haddon are planning to extend the electric line from the city limits of Due West to Mr. Joe Haddon's giving electricity to five families. Now Mr. Editor, if the frogs don't sing me to sleep too early one night next week, I will write to you. C. B. Leonard.

KENTUCKY MAINTAINS LAW AND ORDER

At Lexington, Kentucky, martial law is in full sway following a pitched battle in the main street of that city Monday between members of the National Guard and a mob of several hundred men who were endeavoring to lynch Will Lockett, a negro on trial for attempted assault and murder of Geneva Hardman, a ten-year-old white school girl. Six hundred State and Federal troops were patrolling the streets of Lexington last night and five hundred more Federal troops were on their way to the city from Camp Taylor, the latter including four machine gun battalions and all being members of the First Division which fought at Chateau-Thierry and were engaged in many months of active fighting in France. While the trial was in progress in the Lexington Court House the huge mob which surrounded the building attempted to rush the guards and seize the negro, but the guards opened fire with rifles and machine guns, killing or wounding a score or more and driving the survivors back in confusion. Lockett was arrested and indicted last week and was convicted and sentenced yesterday during a trial which lasted but a few minutes, the entire proceedings setting a new speed record in Kentucky. Although it is of course to be regretted that it was impossible to restrain this mob without fatalities, the matter cannot but be regarded as one which does credit to the Kentucky authorities. While the offense was most hideous, the course of justice was swift and sure, affording no justification whatever for any resort to lynch law, and the example set by the Kentucky authorities in this case, in maintaining the supremacy of the law, is worthy of careful study and emulation in every part of the country.
