Callison, March 20.—(Special)—The influenza epidemic was not so bad in this section this year. Comparatively a small number of families have been touched with the dreaded disease as compared with last year. Mumps and whooping cough have been plentiful. Quite a number of whole families have been having a swell time and others have been broken out all over. None of the above were sufficiently severe for a quarantine. This was fortunate for the community. Speaking of quarantines makes one wonder if after all there isn't a quarantine germ, as yet undiscovered, which is about as contagious as some other common maladies of the head.
