5,503 LOSE LIBERTY BONDS

Valuation of 12,000 Missing Securities Placed at Many Thousands

Washington, Oct. 26.—Between 12,000 and 13,000 Liberty bonds, valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars, have been lost or destroyed or stolen, according to estimates compiled by the treasury department. The latest official figures show 7,503 persons lost bonds. Of these 6,038 were holders of coupon bonds.

Owners of such bonds have little chance to recover them, as there is no means of identification. Owners of registered bonds, who make prompt report of losses, have an excellent chance to recover as the forger or thief can easily be detected when he tries to sell the bond.

Treasury officials are urging holders of coupon bonds to exchange them for registered bonds as promptly as possible. The number of the registered bonds is recorded in Washington and a check for the interest sent to the holder every six months.
