THE LAW SUFFICIENT

We do not suppose that those persons who composed the mob which sought to lynch the slayers of young Brazell intended to do more than take the life of each of the men who helped commit the crime. Their view of the matter, if they had any fixed view in the matter, was that these three men were deserving of death for the offense which they had committed.

The court has adjudged that these men, the slayers of Brazill, are guilty of murder. They have had a fair trial, we assume, in the court of the county where the offense was committed. So far as we are able to judge there was no unusual excitement attending the trial, and the men were given the opportunity to present any facts which might have been adduced in their favor. The court has sentenced these three men to death.

Those who made up the mob may well consider the results obtained. What they sought has been accomplished by the orderly process of the court. Those who sought to stain their hands with the blood of the three men have been spared the regrets which must have followed the taking of the lives of three men by mob action; they have been saved from a charge of murder, a charge if not presented by a grand jury, must needs have been presented at one time or another by their own consciences. If any of them are thoughtful men, and everyone should examine himself at times, each of these men must realize today how much more satisfactory is the result of the cases than would have been the case had the mob had its way.

The mob must be condemned, that is as a mob. The individuals who compose the mob must be made to know that they violate the law when they undertake to execute the law themselves. This may be done without needlessly abusing men who from one cause or another are sometimes misguided, and whose efforts are misdirected. Perhaps nothing has happened recently that is more calculated to cause these men to hesitate and think than the event of the trial in Lexington yesterday. It were well that men who are disposed to find fault with the administration of justice in the courts consider the result of these trials.

THE FULLNESS OF OUR DAY

"When every farmer in the South shall eat bread from his own fields and meat from his own pastures and disturbed by no creditor, and enslaved by no debt, shall sit amid his teeming gardens, and orchards, and vineyards, and dairies, and barnyards, pitching his crops to his own wisdom and growing them in independence, making cotton his clean surplus, and selling it in his own time, and in his chosen market, and not at a master's bidding getting his pay in cash and not in a receipted mortgage that discharges his debt, but does not restore his freedom—then shall be breaking the fullness of our day."—Henry W. Grady, 1888.

FARMER'S BODY IS FOUND

The man had been beaten to death and then placed in the grave, officials say. A small negro boy gave them the information leading to the discovery of his body today. Officials are searching for a negro man whom they say their investigation shows dug the grave at the point of a gun. The negro, named Jesse Kirk, was a farm hand employed by Baumgartner. The killing is said to have occurred yesterday.

MAN AND WOMAN BEATEN BY NEGROES

According to a long distance message from Chappells this morning, early yesterday the two negroes who are alleged to have committed the assault, applied for a job on a road gang near there, claiming that they had come from Abbeville. They failed to secure work and are thought to have remained in hiding in the woods until dusk, when the assault upon the aged couple and the robbery of the store was committed. They asked a negro on the road where H. Johns lived, it is stated.

The two negroes are said to have gone into the store and asked H. Johns for some canned goods. When he turned to get it, one of them struck him a blow over the head with the railroad spike club. Hearing the sound of the old man's body falling, his wife rushed in from an adjoining room and was also struck in the head with the spikes. Both the old people were then beaten almost into insensibility and the store robbed, reports say.

It is thought that the old man will die, reports from him this morning state. He is being given medical attention at his home. His wife is also severely injured.

The two old people have been running a store near Vaughanville for a number of years. H. Johns was a native German, who came to this country years ago and settled where he now lives.

Officers throughout this section have been notified to keep a lookout for the negroes. They are making an effort to locate the tall, yellow negro implicated in the alleged confession of the negro arrested at New Market.—Index Journal.

Millionaire's Son From Far India Enrolls to Pursue Textile Course.

Clemson College, Sept. 11.—Coming to America to study the textile industry, A. D. Muthiah, son of a millionaire banker and manufacturer of Madras, India, has recently enrolled in the textile class here. Wearing his pink turban and with other characteristics of the race, Muthiah is unique among the hundreds of students here.

Muthiah, who is 24 years of age, first learned of Clemson through a Y. M. C. A., secretary who was serving in the Far East with the British forces. This secretary, A. H. Tebban of Kansas City, recommended Clemson College as the best place in America to study the textile industry from every angle, and Muthiah acted on this advice. Muthiah expects to complete the two year course here before returning to India to encourage the establishment of cotton manufacturing plants there.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 13.—Forty-nine dead, 36 injured and 20 missing, together with $8,000,000 property loss—is the toll of the flood which early Saturday morning swept parts of San Antonio as revised and officially given out at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

At the same time it is estimated that the number of dead may ultimately reach 100 when piles of debris along the banks of the San Antonio River, Alazan Creek and San Pedro Creek are searched.

The official figures of $8,000,000 property loss from the flood are given out by the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, following a careful survey of the entire scope of flood damage.

FURMAN OPENS TOMORROW

Greenville, Sept. 14.—With an attendance that will certainly equal and very probably exceed that of last year formal opening exercises of the 1921 '22 session of Furman University will be held Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in Judson Alumni Hall. Brief talks will be made by a number of prominent citizens of Greenville and the principal address of the occasion will be delivered by Dr. John E. White, pastor of the First Baptist church of Anderson and president of Anderson College. Regular class room work will begin Friday morning.

Up until a short while ago it appeared that the enrollment at Furman would fall beneath that of last year, but within the last few days applications for entrance to the University acted to equal the attendance of last session, with registrations still coming in, indications now are that the enrollment will exceed that of last year.

CLEMSON ANSWERS

Best Time To Cut Peavine Hay When Pods Two-Thirds Ripe.

What is the best time to cut peavine hay?—J. R. W., Dillon.

From a feeding standpoint the ideal time to cut peavine hay is when the pods are about two-thirds full. When cut at this stage the maximum amount of feed per acre is obtained. Pea vine hay cut while it is in bloom is very palatable and makes very satisfactory feed, but it does not make as much feed per acre as when cut when the pods are two-thirds filled.
