To the Honorable the Senators and Members of the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of S. Carolina.

**HE humble petition of Jumes Harper and his associates, residing in Augusta, Georgia, respectfull, shews unto your Honorable bodies, that under a charter from the State of Georgia, they have commenced the erection of a Bridge over the Senatorable Bridge. they have commenced the erection of a Bridge over the Savannah River at a point opposite the upper part of the city of Augusta, and about one mile above the town of Hamburg, in South Carolina, that within ten miles of the site just men tioned, are the Ferry of W. Garret, Esq. above at Campbeltown; the Bridge of the Bank of Georgia, and the Sand Bar Ferry below: your petitioners respectfully shew unto your Honorable bodies, that the erection of the said Bridge is demanded by the public convenience of a large portion of both the States of South Carolina and Georgia; that it will shorten and improve in point Georgia; that it will shorten and improve in poin of roads the great South Western route which passes through Augusta, and will greatly benefit the citizens of the upper Districts of South Carolina, in affording them a more direct access to an additional market for their produce. Wherefore they pray your Honorable bodies to grant them a Charter for the erection of said Bridge within the jurisdiction of the State of South Carolina, upor the usual terms and they will ever pray &c.

Dr. John Sappington's ANTI-FEVER PILLS.

Are offered to the public as a certain and effectual remedy for fevers of every description. AM of opinion that all fevers are a unity of disease from the mildest intermittent up to the highest grade of yellow fever, and that the different denominations of fevers, are simply twing to some particular state of the atmosphere or to some peculiar condition of the system; and with slight variations, such as I have made, the treatment should be the same. I am also of opinon that this must be the prevailing theory of the day, or how is it that physicians treat fevers broughout with Calomel and a few other deple-

Description and treatment of fevers, viz:—1st

Description and treatment of fevers, viz:—1st Intermittent or Ague and Ferer. 2dlv. Bilious Ferer. 3dly. Typhus or Nercous Ferer, and all other fevers by whatever name they may be

1st. Of Intermittent or Ferer and Ague. I consider all fevers of an intermittent character which cool off once in twenty-four hours, whether preceded by a chill or not; or whether the fever and chill rise and continue together; or if there be no chill at all. Sometunes fever of this character continues 24 or 45 hours without inter-mission, and sometimes it occurs only every third day. Nine tenths of the fevers of this state, and most other states of this union, partake more or less of this character; and in all their various appearances the treatment should be the same.— This medicine cures by correcting the bile, giv-ing tone and energy to the stomach and bowels, ing tone and energy to the stomach and bowels, and thereby communicating health and strength to the whole system. It is also possessed of such singular and admirable properties, that it does not sicken the stomach nor operate on the bowels as a purgative. It breaks the fever in from 24 to 48 hours, during which time the patient feels no sensible benefit from it, but finds himself suddenly, well without himse assesses. self suddenly well without being conscious of its mode of operation. There is no arsenic or any other article of a poisonous nature in this med-cine. It is entirely harmless; women in any sitthe entrety narmiess; women in any situation may take it with perfect safety; and if double the quantity herein recommended was taken, no bad effects would be produced by it.—

The increased demand for this medicine, has in-The increased demand for this medicine, has induced me in future to prepare it only in the form of pills, as the transportation of vials is both inconvenient and unsafe. For grown persons or children who prefer taking it in a liquid form, it can be prepared conveniently by any person in the following manner: pound twelve pills well, put the preparation into a vial, and pour two common sized table spoonfulls of whiskey or water to it—spirits of any kind are best. Any other quality of the liquid may be prepared at the same time, by increasing or lessening the quantisame time, by increasing or lessening the quanti-ty of the medicine in the same proportion as described above. Treatment.—If the patient prefers taking a puke or purge before he commences the use of this medicine, I have no objection, but it is rarely if ever necessary. He can drink cold water or make use of any kind of diet suitable for a sick person, without the least danger, or suffering the slightest inconvenience from it. A grown person will take for a dose a pill or common sized tea spoonful of the liquid every two hours, both day and night, until the disease is broken: chidren 8 or 10 years old will take : 0 or 40 drops, and those three or four years old will take 15 or 20 drops, and infants 3 or 4 weeks old will take from 3 to 6 drops, repeated and continued as recommended for grown persons. But as person commended for grown persons. But as persons are very subject to a relapse or return of this disease, whether they are cured in this or any other way, it would be well to continue taking three or four doses a day until the strength and complexion are restored, and particularly if the person has already had several relapses. One box will cure two persons of a common attack of ague and force. Before the flighted is taken the vial should be well shaken.

be well shaken. be well shaken.

2dly. Of Bitious Ferer. This is a more obstinate and dangerous disease than intermittent or ague and fever, there are generally three or four days indisposition previous to the onset of this disease, and frequently chilly sensations for a day or two after. When this di ease is properly formed it rarely yields to any treatment under 8 or 10 days, and sometimes much longer.

3dly. Of Trunks on News 15.

3dly, Of Typhus or Nerrous Ferer. This is atill a much more obstinate and dangerous diseas than bilious fever, and apparently more mad in the commencement. It often continues tifteen or twenty days with scarcely any remission or in-termission, with great prestration of body and depression of mind. It may be well to observe that Typhus fever is most common in the winter and spring, and Billions fever in the summer and fall. In the first stage of all fevers, it is common for the tongue to be covered with a whitish coat, and if the fever is not broken and runs into the second stage, it is apt to assume a vellowish brown color, and in the third and last stage of fevers, (and particularly if they are of a high grade and malignant character) the tongue is apt to assume a dark brown color, of different degrees of moisture; sometimes it is exceedingly dry; in this stage of the disease the patient is often sen sible of a hot or burning sensation in the stomach sible of a hot or burning sensation in the stomach. The symptoms of these two diseases are so much alike in their first stage that physicians often differ as to their real character, nor does it matter materially, because the treatment of both should be pretty much the same, with this exception, that typhus fever does not require nor will it bear as much strong sickening medicine as bilions fever.

ous fever. Treatment In the first stage of the two last Treatment In the first stage of the two last diseases, I give a puke or one or two small doses of calomel or some other medicine that will operate upon the stomach and howels. Under any circumstances I object to giving more strong medicine, and am decidedly of opinion that repeated doses of such operating medicines do more harm than good. After thus operating on the stomach and bowels (and even without it) if several days have elapsed and my patient become weak, I commence with the pills and drops, and give a dose every three hours, that is eight doses in each twenty four hours, with a regular use of Virginia snake-root, or some other sweating tea, such as hysup sage or balm. Should ing tea, such as hysup sage or balm. Should the patient suffer much with pain in the head, the patient suffer much with pain in the head, back or elsewhere, give twenty or twenty-five drops of laudanum at night, if it be a grown per-son (children should takeless corresponding with theirages) and should he become much debilita-ted from a continuation of the disease, and par-ticularly if the hands and feet become cold, give a draught of toddy or wine every three or four hours until he recovers; continue all the time to use the pills or drops as recommended. The diet should be light, and taken only a little at a time and often.

Bleeding is so seldom required in these diseases that it is scarcely necessary to mention it; if it ever is resorted to it should be in the early stage of them.

Blistering is sometimes useful and rarely if ever injurious; but it should be chiefly resorted to in the last stage, when there is delirium or lasting oldness in the extremities. In the treatment of either of these diseases, I would prefer the bowels to be in rather a costive than laxative condition. But should the bowels be too inactive, give broken doses of salts or oil, or open them with injections, and if they should be two laxative, give six or eight drops of laudanum two, three or four times a day, until the loosness is restrained. My experience in the treatment of restrained. By experience were expensive, but it is neither more nor less than the highest grade of bilious fever, and should be treated pretty much in the same way.
