Resolved, That in consideration of the pressing importance of the occasion, the danger to the lives of those who are already, and have been for a long time defrauding of their liberties, it is proper for the citizens nearest their oppressed or manacled countrymen, to embrace every occasion to afford them succor assistance and relief; whether by contribution of money and clothing to them individually, or in furnishing aid to those whose success in an impending enterprise, would ensure the same object.

Resolved, That the Constitution of this country recognizes the right of our citizens to travel wheresoever they please, and in what manner they think fit, and in what numbers they may deem prudent, provided they do not embark as an armed, organized body, direct for a country at peace with these United States, for the purpose of warring upon said country—and that persons so leaving this country, for the purpose of redressing wrongs done their countrymen or indirectly to punish offences against their government, are performing an act not in patriotism to the defence of their own soil from the foot of an invader.

Resolved, That the Republic of Texas is at peace with that of the United States, and it is therefore lawful for the citizens of this country to go to Texas in what manner and at what times, and in what numbers they think fit; provided they have no hostile purpose towards Texas, and that when they arrive in said Republic, they have a right, and it is proper for them to do such acts and things as may be conducive to their own good, the assistance of their fellow citizens, and the redressing of wrongs done their countrymen.
