

[ORINAL.] MAY.

Then blooming daughter of the Spring, At thy approach, t e songsters sing, The Lunct whistles in the bush And on the branches chirps the Thrush. Great Mistress of the vocal train, Sweet Philomela sings again, The mocking bird renews his song. And sweetly sings the groves aming The trees in verdure now array'd Create a sweet, refreshing shade Oh ever blooming, beauteous May, Oh! ever memorable day, When with my strains, the woods first rang. When to the rural muse I sang. In solitude, remote, alone. I sang to all the world unknown. But now I celebrate the day. When first I fram'd the imperfect by. When first my weak and infant tongue Essayed to cleant the poet's song. May, 6th, 1821.

Paraphrase of a part of the Eighth Psalm. When I behold the stars so bright, And Moon the beauteous queen of night, The glorious sun which makes the day, And chases dark-brow'd night away; I can't my God, but laud thy name, Enraptured, loudly I exclaim, Oh let the great and glorious Lord, By every creature be adored.

A SATIRE.

Perdidi Diem-I have lost a day!" The great Vespasian's greater son did say. How many a lass, how many a modish dame, How many a top more justly might exclaim; " Perdicit Dies-1 have days destroye But if not lost now foolishly employed?" Ev'n, I who write this rude, satirie lay, May mourn the loss of many an ill-spent day. Thus when its past, our time we learn to prize. And from our follies only, will be wise.

IMITATION OF HORACE. Should one wise Cate ape with brow severe, With count nance stern, with feet exposed and

With dirty, sensity, short, and tattered dress, Would be wise Cato's virtues too possess !

EPITAPII - Imitation.

The thymer F, removes here. For whom when living some did care, For whom when icad, none shed a tear, Of him no better can be said, Than that he liced but now is dead.

> UPON A COME ACTOR. Imitation of Puppieus.

THE SICK MISER.

Imitation of Horace. Old greasy Jack, a miser oor Frid heaps of gold, he had in store, Was token with a drowsy map. And soon, would be have died, mayhap. So that his heir now mad with pleasure, His colie's search'd to get his treasure. The doctor in him kept the breath. In spite of greedy monsiem death But now did Esculapius do, To clicat grim death, thus sharply so? He sets a hox old Jack before, And on it, eash in heaps doth nour, Some needy rogues who then stood by To plander, it old Jack should die, To count his cash, to crowds now come, In hopes of slyly stealing some. The meter eyed had and did say. Unless you watch both night and day, Your heir will bear you, bags a ay. What! rob me, whits: I yet do live, Puopy! nor wait for me, to give, On villain! villam!" "Step I say, to my tale attention my He has been ranninging your coffers, And sir, he made me lavish offers, His deed nefacious to conceal, But sir, a their I will reveal. Ad te is. I tell you as a friend And on my word you may depend." "An me! ah me! oh car there be!! Another such an imp as he? A single mill be should not have, From ruinnaion inne to save! From ruimation time to save!
Since all are regars to come for pelf,
One exampt now, trust one's own self!
The doctor says, "This pill I give you,"
Win contolless, very so n refleve you,"
"Pur pray! tell me the perce kind sir,"
"A tralle," "this reme self." It is one can did only cost, I'd think the money ad was lest. But say," "Englit cents," what eight cents, ha! Good souls alive! Cight cents you say! My stars! what crame have you been doing? My whole estate will go to ruin! Eight cents, eight cents, may grim death take

If your extravagence wont break me? What! eight! Ah yes, eight cons are gone, When one, yes one, as well had done?"

The following lines were spoken by some young lacies, who represented the Seasons, at the celebration of the first of May.

Spring. 1

From the bright sunny climes of the South I have come. From the climes, where stern winter shall never appear; I have come from that land, where the flow'cis e'er bloom, And breathe out their rich fragrance, the long, happy year.

2

A chaplet of roses on my head I e'er wear; On my bosom, the tulip and violet ore seen; Ever shedding their odors around in the air. My timone is of flowers-o'er the earth I'm now queen.

Summer.

1 I'm the child of the sun who sits on a throne Of the bright sinning fire which e'er burns the long year, I have come from the climes of the fierce, torrid

And to-day, in these regions of peace I appear.

The bail and the snow-storms have new far fled away; They have gone to the lands of the bleak, frozen north.

Round my proud, lofty brow shall the lightning e'er play, As I speak, the loud thunder o'er earth shall

The young blushing spring o'er the earth lately smil'd. All hearts were enchanted-and all bow'd to her will. I'm the grave, elder sister of that maiden mild. What she promis'd to mortals, 'tis mine to fulfil.

A full sheaf of ripe corn well adorus my brown hair. Wither'd leaves and pale flowers my bosom veil o'er. In my hands, for glad mortals rich presents I see her no more.

Winter.

1 Now the leaves are all fallen-no flow'rets will bloom. The verdure and gladuess of bright Summer are gone, The fierce sleet and the snow wrap the earth in deep gloom, And Winter, stern Winter rules a sovereign operation. alone.

The glad insects which chirp'd in the warm summer day.

Forever are hush'd—they have liv'd out their brief hour. The jound bright Spring-birds have now all flown away, Lo! all nature is dumb, and submits to my power.

Consumption Curea. THE following letter is from a highly

TABLE OF STREET OFFICE OF STREET

respectable merchant, dated Lewistown, N. Y., Sept. 10, 1844 Dr. D. JAYNE .- Dear Sir: It is said by Physicians, and is by the mass of mankind believed that consumption cannot be cured -that when once it becomes scated in the human system, nothing can eradicate or stay its progress, but that it will continue the work of destruction until its victim sinks into the grave. However true this may be in theory, I am disposed to doubt it in fact; indeed, which are the causes of disease in the individ my own experience, and a desire to henefit others, compets are to pronounce the assertion natrice. You will probably recollect, sir, that in the beginning of 1840 I wrote to you, stating that I had the Consumption, and that it was fast harrying me to the grave. I did not then, nor do I now donot, every sympsom was too to be of a fine healthy habit; who wish in have profully visible. My Physicians con-sidered me incurable, but the advice which I asked of you was given, and I are happy to say that by using a few botdes of your incomparable medicine-the EXPECTORANT, I was restored, and never in my life have I enjoyed better or more uninterrupted health since that time. If you should see n.c now, you would imagine by my appearance that I had never been sick, much less that I had had the Consumption, but that I am still living, I ascribe wholly and entirely to your EXPECTORANT.
