

pany, moistened with his own heart's blood, was made by both the Chairman and Col. Carroll, and an especial tribute of respect was paid to the memory of private THOS. F. TILMAN, of the Edgefield Company, who fell in battle.

A plan of the battle fields, representing the advance of the American army, the different points of attack, and the position of the forces on both sides, had been prepared by Dr. R. T. Mims, and at the request of the Chairman, was explained by Capt. N. L. Griffin in such a way as to impart much interest to the meeting.

The following preamble and resolutions offered by Col. Carroll at the close of his remarks, were unanimously adopted:

The recent successes of the American arms in the contest with Mexico, must awaken the strongest emotions throughout the wide extent of our country. Again have we been victorious—again have the soldiers of the Republic won fresh laurels on the immortal fields of Contreras and Churubusco. It is not the part of a gallant and generous people to exult over the misfortunes of a fallen foe; but it is right and proper, when skill and valor have achieved the most splendid triumphs, and shed a glorious lustre upon our national character, that we give expression to the feelings of patriotism, and greet with acclamations the chosen who have borne their country's flag to battle and to victory. While fully participating in these feelings, we may be excused for saying, that the occasion makes a special appeal to us as citizens of South Carolina, and of Edgefield District. The Palmetto Regiment, under the lead of its gallant Colonel, acted well its part, amid the scenes calculated to appal the firmest hearts. We have to mourn the loss of its gallant commander, but the manner of his death brings with it the proudest consolation. Pale, faint and wasted, from long protracted illness, he left his bed upon the first sound of the distant cannon, and with a spirit undaunted amid the storm of the battle, fell at the head of his Regiment while gallantly leading it on to victory. He was a native of this District, and here is now the residence of his family. Allied to us by early associations, by kindred, by the most intimate and cherished friendship through life, we cannot be content with the ordinary demonstrations of respect, but must be permitted to mourn as one mourns for his own household, and to bewail his grave with tears of sincerest affection. But we lay no exclusive claim to his fame and his glory, these belong to his State and his country, and must be regarded as the common inheritance of us all. He died as he would have wished, at the head of his Regiment on the field of battle; thus adding another to the illustrious line of martyred heroes whose names are chronicled in history, and whose fame shall live forever.

Resolved 1st, That the recent and brilliant triumphs of our national arms on the fields of Contreras and Churubusco, are destined to add largely to the fame of our country and deserve to be recorded on the brightest pages of her history.

Resolved 2d, That the Palmetto Regiment has nobly sustained the character of the State, and that its officers and men are entitled to our grateful commendation, for their conspicuous display of valor and intrepidity on unworthy of the days of the revolution.

Resolved 3d, That while we mourn the loss of Col. PIERCE M. BUTLER, as of one allied to us by long cherished and intimate association, and endeared to us by the recollection of his gallant ancestry, and his own noble and generous character, and while we tender to his immediate relations our warmest and deepest sympathy in their bereavement, we at the same time derive the proudest consolations from his heroic death, encountered as it was at the head of his regiment, in the front of the battle, at the post of honor, and in his country's cause.

Resolved 4th, That the gallant bearing of the Company from this District, in the memorable action of the 20th August, commands our unqualified admiration, and that it is with triumph that we point to them as citizens of Edgefield.

Resolved 5th, That we regard with mingled emotions of pride and sorrow, the death of Lieut. DAVID ADAMS, the youthful and patriotic soldier falling in stainless honor upon his first battle field, with the flag of his company clasped in his hand, and consecrated with his blood.

Resolved 6th, That we warmly appreciate the courage and spirit displayed by THOMAS F. TILMAN, of the Edgefield Company, and that we deeply lament his untimely death.

Resolved 7th, That as a faint expression of our sympathy with the immediate relatives of Col. P. M. Butler, Lieut. David Adams, and private Thomas F. Tilman, in their affliction, a copy of the foregoing resolutions be transmitted by the Secretary of this meeting to each of their families.

On motion of James Terry, Esq., it was resolved, That an account of the proceedings of this meeting be prepared by the Secretary, and that he request their publication in the Edgefield Advertiser, and the other newspapers of this State.

TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD.
At a regular meeting of Concordia Lodge, No. 50, of Free and Accepted Masons, held at their room, in the Town of Edgefield, on the evening of the 15th inst., the following preamble and resolutions were introduced by brother Wm. H. Atkinson, and unanimously adopted:

Whereas intelligence has lately reached our village, of the death of our worthy and beloved brother Col. P. M. BUTLER, and THOMAS F. TILMAN, while gallantly leading, and fighting the battles of our country on the bloody plains of Churubusco;

And whereas, we deem it but just, that we should commemorate in a suitable manner, their gallantry and heroism at that trying occasion;

Therefore be it resolved, That while we learn with sincere regret their untimely end, and the great loss to their families, and to our Order; yet we cannot fail to admire their valor and noble bearing, and hold them up as bright and shining examples of patriotism to future generations.

Resolved, That in the event of the bodies of our deceased brethren being brought home for interment, we will cheerfully unite, with other Lodges, in paying our last tribute of respect to their remains.

Resolved, That the members of this Lodge do wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Lodge, be tendered to the brethren of Crescent Lodge, of New Orleans, for the courteous notice taken by them, of our lamented brother Col. P. M. Butler.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of the afflicted families, for whose loss we mourn, and to whom in their afflictions we give our sympathy.

Resolved, That the above preamble and resolutions be published in the Edgefield Advertiser, and that all the papers in this State be requested to copy them.

Millville, Sept. 20th, 1847. }

In testimony of that respect which is due to the memory of the late Col. P. M. BUTLER, and his companions in arms of the Palmetto Regiment, who fell at the late victorious but bloody battle near the gates of the city of Mexico, among whom were Lieut. DAVID ADAMS, and THOMAS F. TILMAN, late of this Regiment, and in accordance with a long established custom the Commissioned Officers of the 7th Regiment are requested to wear the usual badge of mourning upon the left arm, and upon the hilt of the sword on the day (25th inst.) of Regimental Parade and Review at the Old Wells.

For the Advertiser.

In my first communication I submitted my views in regard to the growing crop of Cotton; the second related to Railroads and their importance to this section of country; and this shall be devoted to the Mineral Waters, climate and scenery of the mountain region through which I have passed.

The first in order is the Glenn Spring, in the lower part of Spartanburg District, in our own State; at which there is a large boarding house and comfortable cabins, capable of accommodating from one hundred and fifty to two hundred visitors, under the immediate supervision of its obliging proprietor Mr. Zimmerman. This spring, for the sanative properties of its waters, in various stages of dyspepsia, hepatical complaints and derangement of the Viscera, has a reputation, surpassed by no Mineral Water in the Southern States. It is a gentle and unpretending fountain, which flows almost imperceptibly from the hill, at the base of which it is situated, and altho' to the eye it affords nothing pleasing or attractive, yet it carries in its limpid draughts, healing and life giving properties. I am not informed of the properties of this water is composed, but I presume that salts and magnesia predominate, with a minute portion of lime possibly. It acts as an aperient and diuretic, and occasionally acts on the skin. The boarding house, during the present season, has been well conducted, the table amply furnished with all great variety of meats and vegetables as are furnished in this portion of the State, and generally well dressed, at which the proprietor is generally presiding, giving attention to his guests, and superintending the servants, who are capable and attentive.

The location of this spring in the lower part of Spartanburg District, and its vicinity to Fairforest creek, constitute the only objection, which I have ever heard suggested against it as a watering place. If it was in the neighborhood of the mountains, it would be the great resort of all the invalids, and a large portion of our travelling community, and would soon rival the far famed White Sulphur Springs in the number of its visitors annually. You pass from the Glenn Spring in the direction of the mountains to Limestone, which you can reach by an easy day's travel. This is a large and beautiful fountain of water, that gushes from the bosom of the earth in a gurgling stream, and invites you by its limpid appearance, to partake of its cooling waters, whether you be tired to gratify the taste or to slake the thirst. It afforded a few years ago a resort in summer for the most fashionable portion of our people and could then boast of the beauty and fishery, that daily tread its shady walks, and nightly trod its brilliant hall to the light measures of the merry dance, but its glory in this respect has departed, and the gay and merry crowds which then indulged in all the pleasures of song and dance, have given place to other tenants, not less young and lovely than their predecessors. The establishment has been converted into a seminary of learning for the education of young ladies, and is under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Curritt, a gentleman, of ample qualifications as a teacher of great moral worth and of agreeable manners, liberal in his opinions and principles, without sectarian bigotry, or covert desire of proselyting those entrusted to his care to his own faith and doctrines. I derive, from his information from a distinguished faculty of the State, who resides in the vicinity and who by the gentle courtesy of his manners, and by the flowing and pleasing hospitality, displaying in a simple mansion, contributing greatly to the interest of the place, and renders a visit of a few days exceedingly agreeable. From Limestone to Wilson Spring, a distance of twenty two miles, you pass over an undulating country until you pass Broad river at Ellis bridge, and thence on a ridge, which affords one of the best roads in the upper country until you reach Wilson Spring. This spring is in the county of Cleveland, within ten miles of the county town of Shelby, and in a hilly part of the country, sufficiently near the mountains to have cool and refreshing nights, and to be exempt from fever. This spring is the most inviting and refreshing fountain of water, that I have ever seen. It runs from a solid rock into a small basin cut in the rock, and when viewed at its mouth, offers to the excited palate a draught, not less tempting than the imaginary fountain, whose fabulous waters possessed the revivifying properties of restoring vigor and animation to old age. I regard this as among the most valuable mineral Springs in the United States. It is greatly to be regretted, that it is in the possession of a man, who to say the least of him, is the most unmanageable and incomprehensible churl on the face of the earth, and who obstinately rejects all advice, and as obstinately pursues the suggestion of his own short-sighted policy. He cannot be induced either to sell or improve his establishment, so as to afford accommodations to the hundreds of invalids, who would visit the spring on account of its medicinal qualities, provided they could obtain entertainment. At present he cannot entertain over fifteen or twenty persons, and with that number, they are crowded into small rooms without fire places, and often as many as four in one chamber. The grounds around the spring would admit of great improvement, and in the hands of an enterprising and obliging landlord, this spring would soon become one of the principal resorts in summer, for the inhabitants of North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, who would flock to it in search of health and pleasure. It passes from Wilson's gap, to Col. Deavers Sulphur Spring, situated four or five miles from Asheville, where I remained about ten days. The water of this spring is similar in taste and properties, to that of Wilsons, but not so highly mineral; and its effects are similar, but in a slightly diminished degree. The boarding house is located on the crown of an elevated hill, in the bosom of the mountains, which are visible in every direction, and look the horizon, around the entire circle. The block of buildings is large and roomy, the table excellent, the landlord attentive and obliging, and the climate at this period of the year, as cool and bracing as heart could wish. In fact, during a clear and temperate day, the air is absolutely exhilarating. It is an agreeable spot to pass a short time, independent of the medicinal qualities of the water, as it affords a delightful temperature in the atmosphere, good accommodations and an intelligent and courteous company of visitors, who form an agreeable social circle. The Warm Springs, which are situated about thirty five miles in a north-western direction from this place, on the bank of the French Broad river, have been a resort for invalids and the travelling community, for something like fifty years, and from their deserved celebrity, require no further notice here: I have heard from all the visitors, the respectable proprietor of the establishment spoken of in terms of extravagant commendation for his assiduous attention to his guests, and for the excellence of his table, during the present summer. The next point of attraction in the circle is Casar's head, on the summit of the Saluda mountains, within our own State, and at the distance of three miles of the North Carolina line. From Col. Deavers, you can reach this mountain top, either by a direct road, partly running up the valley of French Broad river, which increases the distance nineteen miles, by the angle which you form, in passing to and from these last places to Casar's head. A visit to the Flat-rock settlement is always interesting, and should not be neglected. For the tasteful and highly improved residences, which dot the valley at the foot of the Blue ridge, for miles in extent, occupied in summer by the intelligent and courteous, who form a social circle, inferior to none in the South, and for the exhilarating and equable climate, unsurpassed by none upon the face of the earth, I know of no place that offers more attractions to the invalid or pleasure seeking traveller. Let me advise every one to visit it and judge for himself. We have now reached, kind reader, in the progress of this narrative, Casar's head, an elevated ridge of mountains in the N. West corner of Greenville District, just coming into notice, but destined by its rich and magnificent mountain scenery, greatly to surpass the table rock or any other local spot in the Southern States, in point of interest and attraction, except, perhaps, the rock mountain in Georgia, which is represented as an object of stupendous grandeur.

I will forbear an attempt at description, and content myself with merely remarking, that the view from Casar's head at 6 o'clock in the morning for extent of prospect, spread out before the eye like a vast plain of deep forest verdure, with white vapour, extending over each farm like a curtain, and imparting to the view the appearance of a chain of lakes, dotting every part of the immense valley below you, far exceeds anything I have ever seen. I can conceive of no combination of qualities, in an individual, that could be more appropriate to his uniqueness of character, to this remarkable spot, than the jovial and good tempered landlord Colonel Hagood, who is a sort of lion of the mountains, having perched himself on this bold cliff, like the wild eagle on his aerie, the lord of much he surveys, and when he exercises the privilege of indulging his broad jests and merriment without fear or favour, and at the same time dispensing a free and unpretending hospitality in his own way, that is peculiarly agreeable to his visitors. There is really a fitness, a sort of adaptation between this mountain fastness and its bold and roistering tenant. He abounds in humor, repartee, jests and anecdotes, in which he freely indulges with his visitors, but always without rudeness or offensiveness. In short, the broad jokes of their host, the ample and well prepared viands of his table, the magnificent prospect and delicious climate of this mountain resting place, all conspire to beguile away time, and ensure a man to return for a season that he is an invalid and a sufferer. If the patient be laboring under hypochondria, let me advise him, especially, to pay a visit to Casar's head, and place himself under the treatment of Col. Hagood, and if he be not far gone in his disease, he will soon experience, by the mild administration of the colonel's merry jokes and jolly repartees, all his fleshly or mental ills, passing away like morning vapour from the mountain tops before the rising sun, and all his fancied sufferings being lost in the mystic lethos of merriment and laughter.

MR. EDITOR:—It has been remarked by Godwin, an English Divine, that nature has implanted within us, unexpressible desire to communicate to others every thought conceived by our minds, according as it seems interesting or important to us. This propensity of human nature, I feel on the present occasion, strongly urging me to relate to my friends at home, a few thoughts which I have conceived, and to describe a few scenes which I have witnessed. And as it is very gratifying to my vanity to appear in print, I have ventured to ask the privilege of speaking through your columns. You know, Mr. Editor, that it is a delusion peculiar to the unsophisticated, to suppose, that whatever is novel or striking to the beholder, will be equally so to him, who witnesses to the cold, dull tale, when told in mere prose. In short, Mr. Editor, I have rambled again, and I wish to tell you about it. But you can publish or not as you please without giving me the slightest offence. Well, there was little to amuse me, either at the Sulphur or Warm Springs, and so I rambled among the mountains, and sought in the wild woods and unfrequented hills that congeniality of spirit and complacency of mind, which I could not find in those bustling haunts of gallant beaux and sparkling belles. From the Warm Springs, I concluded to make an excursion into East Tennessee, and there to refresh myself with a survey of society in its primeval simplicity, and to catch pleasure as she floats on the breeze or dances along these Hesperian groves.

So now I found myself once more wandering along the banks of the French Broad in meditation lost; now checking my horse to gaze for a moment, in fearful amazement, on the wild precipice, or rugged mass of rocks, which, from a giddy height, seemed to threaten me with ruin; now to look on the splashing waters as they tumble from rock to rock, and hurry down the rugged channel of that romantic river; and now to turn envious admiration to the abode of the happy mountaineer, who in merry glee, chants some rural lay as he plies his daily, but refreshing toil. Thus occupied, I lingered for a few hours on the picturesque banks of the French Broad, below the Warm Springs, and then I hastened into Tennessee. What can I say of the crops of this productive and ever abundant state, except that they are everywhere fine? Here too the engrossing topic of every class and profession of men is rail roads—connection with the Atlantic cities and the general advancement of the South and West. In East Tennessee, Mr. Editor, the people generally are very enthusiastic, in talk at least, in relation to a rail road to connect them with Georgia, and there you may lose all that trade which now pours into South Carolina from that part of Tennessee. I made a short stay at Greenville in E. Tennessee, but sufficiently long, to place me under lasting obligations to its citizens for kindness and attention to me. The village contains several neat brick buildings; and there are two schools here, one in a very flourishing condition; and at a short distance is situated its College, at which there are about seventy or eighty students under the instruction of competent Teachers. I left Tennessee, however, very favorably impressed both in relation to the hospitality of the people and to the prosperous condition of the country. So I turned again towards N. Carolina, and as I approached the French Broad, I witnessed a scene most exquisite and impressive, which I must describe to you.

It was Saturday, and late in the afternoon. The sky over head was clear and serene; a gentle breeze played upon its mountain summits, while below a peaceful lovely calm prevailed. The sun was slowly gliding down the western slopes, while all the eastern hills were "burnished with richest gold." In the distant horizon, gracefully touching the mountain tops, lay many a thousand folds, now embracing, now withdrawing from each other, while the playful sun beams peep through and throw a new lustre on all its scenes around. Invited by so many a whispering charm, I ascended Point Mountain, and threw my eyes upon the whole surrounding scene, which was indistinguishably beautiful. Here I realized with my own senses, what hitherto I had only seen in poetry and song.—The towering hill—the meandering stream—the merry hymn of the sylvan choristers, all at once poured their united charms upon me. While from the little cottage, situated in the green valley below, the smoke rose in a thousand gentle folds, and in many a fantastic wreath threw itself about my head, thus giving me an affectionate welcome to the happy mountain valley. Nor was I alone in this scene of happiness, for in the cheerful valley beneath me, the ever thrilling song of liberty was chaunted, and in choral harmony the youth and maidens joined their sonorous voices, and thus this endearing token of freedom was reverberated from hill to hill.

Your friend,
THE RAMBLER AMONG THE MOUNTAINS.
Glenn Springs, Sept. 14th, 1847.

Columbia and Charlotte Rail Road.—Mr. John Caldwell, who returned yesterday has kindly handed us the unanimous nomination of the Convention for officers, which is as follows:

E. G. Palmer, President.
Directors.—F. H. Elmore, B. F. Taylor, James Martin, Jno. Buchanan, S. McAllister, J. A. Bradley, Edward Avery, W. W. Elms, J. W. Osborne, A. B. Davidson.

The stock subscribed, independent of the subscription of York District, is upwards of $900,000. The subscription of York amounts to $150,000, which may be yet added to the above.—South Carolina.

An Intimating Iron Great Britain.—The Washington Whig mentions a report that Mr. Crampton, the British Minister pro. tem., has submitted, by order of his government, to Mr. Buchanan, an intimation that, in the event of an absorption of the territory of Mexico by the U. States, Great Britain will look to the United States for the reimbursement of the debt due by the present Mexican government to the subjects of the United Kingdom. And also, that the intimation goes even further—that, if the war with Mexico shall end in any serious dismemberment of Mexican territory, this government will be called upon by Great Britain to make good the English Mexican debt in proportion to the value of the territory dismembered.

We give the above as an item of current news, but we do not believe that any such intimation has been given.

Anticipated Action of Congress.—We clip the following paragraphs from the National Intelligencer, as indicative of the action of the majority of the next Congress. They are in answer to the question—"What will Congress do?"

"We cannot answer for Congress; nor indeed for that portion of the two Houses with whom we most generally accord. We have said, as we believe, however, that they will not stop the supplies in order to stop the war. If a majority of both Houses are of opinion that it is time to put an end to the war, we do not doubt that a way will be found, in which the President himself will be glad to co-operate, to accomplish that object. If a majority shall be of a different way of thinking, then of course they would not stop the supplies in order to stop the war. By supplies, it is perhaps proper to explain, (on account of a different construction we have seen put upon the phrase as used by us,) we mean such provision of ways and means as is necessary to execute existing laws, and fulfill all contracts which have been made under them."

"Though we cannot answer for Congress, nor even for the Whigs in the two Houses, what they will do, we feel entire confidence that, if it be no sooner ended, the war will not be suffered to continue for the further acquisition of Mexican territory. That much, we think, we can promise for Congress."

Death of the Hon. G. H. Proffit.—The Louisville papers announce the death of the Hon. George H. Proffit, formerly a member of Congress from Indiana, and recently Minister to Brazil, who died in that city recently.

Public Meeting at Willington. A meeting of the citizens of Abbeville District will be held at Willington, Thursday, the 30th September, to consider the measures necessary to improve the navigation of the Savannah River. The citizens of Georgia, and the members of the Legislature from Edgefield, Abbeville and Pendleton, are especially invited, and will be expected. A Barbecue will be provided, and a fine Band of Musicians will be present.

The Ladies are particularly invited.

Although I have declined attending to a War House, I still continue the Commission Business in this place; and have safe and convenient storage room for GOODS to be RECEIVED and FORWARDED, Flour, Bacon, &c. &c.

Cotton consigned to me will be stored on the most advantageous terms or sold on arrival, as may be directed.

Consignments of Cotton and other Produce, of Merchandise to be forwarded, and Orders for the purchase of Goods respectfully solicited.

Sale of Land.
As the Agent of Mrs. Beheind Butler, I am authorized to say, that she will offer for sale, on Thursday the 25th of October next, her plantation on Big Creek, containing 1125 acres, will be sold, on that day, at the Homestead, in three tracts—

The tract known as the Bridge tract, lying on each side of the road, leading from Richard Coleman's to Mount Willing, contains one hundred and eighty one acres. This tract is well supplied with water, having Big Creek for its northern boundary—a constant fresh water pond near the bridge, and a good spring on its eastern boundary. It is mostly in woods, and is well adapted to Cotton, Corn and Oats.

The next tract, known as the Deny tract, contains one hundred and sixty five acres, and lies west of the same road, and runs up in an angle to the cross roads at Mecklen. It is entirely in woods.

The remaining tract, containing 777 acres, known as the Home Place, has upon it a good dwelling house, gin and other houses, and in many respects is a desirable dwelling place—being a body of land, well adapted to farming, and having pure springs and streams of water on it.

Terms of sale. One two and three years credit, with an obligation and good security—interest from the date and payable annually.

Warehouse & Commission BUSINESS.
HAMBURG, S. C.

THE Subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the public generally, that he will continue the Warehouse & Commission BUSINESS, AT THE RAIL ROAD DEPOT.

The convenience of this Establishment is too well known to require much comment. Cotton or other Produce once in store can be put on the Rail Road without the additional expense of drayage, &c.; which is certainly an item worth notice, both to merchants and planters.

My charges will be as reasonable as any factor like concerns in the place, and the usual facilities given to those who may give me their patronage.
