the 9th of September, before the very first of their future course of conduct, and give it the ral honor than perhaps any other. So lately these Bills was perfected into an Act, and it was not until the 20th of the same month, that party, and was supported by all the friends of the whole of them received the highest sanction of law. Allow then, at least, ten days for their promulgation, and you will see that we of Delegates to a Southern Congress, which was could not have come properly into possession of never to meet, while the sun shone or rivers ran, them until the first of October. The election for Members to the Legislature took place on the second Monday in October. What opportunity then, did your Members have to advise with you, relative to these recent inflictions of Federal and Legislative tyranny? None in the world. Their sentiments were not even called for, through the papers. You would, at that time, have deemed it an act of supererogation. Your feelings and to a State Convention, came matured from the sintiments were so clearly made known, by every word you uttered, and by every look and gesture, that your Delegates must have been blind men not to have interpreted your wishes. Gentlemen, they did read you correctly, and they men who seek to warp your judgments, and to distort the real issues presented for your consideration. One of your Members to the House, the People's being forced into a false position, by refused to vote for the Convention Bill, at one of refused to vote for the Convention Bill, at one of its readings, because, in his estimation, it was not a measure of sufficient strength, and his false friends have proclaimed—far too ignorant to purpose being misunderstood, he was met by the be freemen, if you admit, as has been asserted, consuming indignation of his constituents, until by those who are now soothing you, with gentle he could explain the motive that governed his

"Peace is despair'd, For who can think submission? War then, war, Open or understood, must be resolved."

The manner of conducting this war could not then be determined upon, because the bitter cup of our wrongs had not yet been filled, and Congress had not yet completed the full measure of its most monstrous and wicked tyranny. The candidates were net, and could not be advised as to the precise mode of redress, because the Nashville Convention, and the Georgia Convention and the Mississippi Legislature were still to assemble, and no human foresight could predict their ultimate action, with any degree of certainty. But it is necessary that all Legislatures shall be clothed with some trust, otherwise they would be perfectly insignificant and just as inefficient, as would be the unwieldly democratic assemblies that once met in Greece. It is impossible for the people, in unorganized congregations scribe the precise manner of making and ws, unless you could suppose every man a legislator, and every voter a scholar.

How then, did your Members and your Legislature discharge the trust reposed in them? When they met in solemn deliberation, under all the sancetions of law and religion; they knew that your watch-word was resistance—that their honor, and the honor of the State, and the safety and the interests of posterity demanded of them to resist. They felt, that if they tamely succumbed to the greedy spirit of avarice and fanaticism, and submissively prostrated themselves under the wheels of the car of the American Juggernaut, they and their children would be doomed to perpetual infamy. They could almost see in their minds, the disembodied forms of their fathers rebuking their feul degeneracy. of the great enterprise of her heart, to wait two Under such circumstances, unless they were the basest of men, they were bound to act. Therefore, since they had not been able to learn the lature may not call the Convention together unt express wishes of their constituents touching the latter part of the next year, and then the Con the extent of their action, they considered it both bold and prudent to put the State in a defensive attitude, and to call a Convention of the people defence of your property and honor, the wisdom which means to call the people themselves to- of man could not have placed you in a more hapgether-that they might determine in their ca- py situation than that in which you now find pacity of sovereigns, the course of policy which

Yet, some of those who now assume to enlighten and direct you, would persuade us, that on the day of election, you were entirely uninformed of the mighty issues you were beginning to decide. If you were, in truth, so utterly indifferent to your vital interests, as these men would represent you, you are likely to live slaves, and die so. It was never intended by any one, that the early day for the election of Delegates, was designed to take from the People the control of the destiny of South Carolina. That day was appointed, in order that the great questions for de sion, and the great causes of complaint might lose none of the interest they excited, and in order that the State might have a Convention ready or ganized, to take advantage of any fortunate contingency that might happen, in the progress the events that are now transpiring. Why, if it should be judged most conducive to the interest and safety of South Carolina, and to the success years for the co-operation of her sisters, accord ing to the provisions of that Bill, it is entirely consistent and proper for her to do so. power—the English mission—was offered successively to three of her sons—Calhoun, the Union.

Perhaps the most extraordinary trait in the course of South Carolina on the pending question is the unity, the unamimity of her eople. On an occasion so imporant, so vial. so new, her population, property, and intellect, seem to be in almost perfect harmony. There is almost no difference of opinion as o the object, the only question is as to the time, the mode, and the means.

This is the most solemn and impressive protest that has ever been made against an set of the federal government. It goes to the very existence of the system at once.

Now there are some county lawyers, and cross-road party politicians, that can settle this difficulty compendiously. They would compel South Carolina to obey this government, and submit to a continuance in this Union, under the pains and penalties of treason. But no statesman will be found capa-ble of such folly. Mr. Burke, who was a statesman, and who certainly did not lean too much to liberty from power, declared he did not know how to draw a bill of indictment against a whole people,-and that it could never be presumed that a whole people could be factious, or deluded, in reference to their own rights and interests. The course, however, towards South Carolina begins to be indicated. It is to foment division and enmity among her people. The National Intelligencer of yesterday, attempts o excite the "mass of the people of South Carolina" against the "aristocracy and here-ditary wealth of the State," for using "its political power to answer it personal ends." Congress had just begun to perfect a system of a congress had just begun to perfect a system of the chronic organ of privilege, of corporation. Now, when such a paper as the Intelligencer, such a state of affairs, men that you confided in, of protection, of class, comes out for the masses against aristocracy and hereditary wealth, what is to be expected next? Will i pronounce for abolition and socialism, like its co-party friend, the Tribune?

But the expedients of despotism are the ame. The court of Austria has long been exciting the races and sects of Hungary against each other, in order to overthrow the constitution of that kingdom-Croats against Magyars, Catholics against Protestants.

Published Daily, and Tri-weekly at Columbia, S. C .. At Four Dollars Daily, and Two Dollars Tri-Weekly, per annum, payable invariably six nonths in advance.

The Publisher, though fully aware that the co The Publisher, shough fully aware that the commercial necessities of Columbia do not require the assistance of another journal, is yet well satisfied that the questions now agitating the State, demand a more thorough and searching examination than they have yet received. To the furtherance of this they have yet received. To the furtherance of this object, will the energies of this journal be directed, in order that the people may have all the lights before them, in deciding upon the policy to be adopted by them in seeking for their rights, and redress for their injuries and grievances.

Though they entertain no doubt about the right of a State to secede at any time, and that upon this right depends the sovereignty of the States, and in this the only protection of the citizen against a centralized, consolidated power; yet believing, as they do, that the exercise of this right at this crisis, by what is now called "immediate severate State by what is now called "immediate seperate State action," is a hazardous remedy, if indeed a remedetend, is a materious remedy, it indeed a remedy, at all of those grievances, involving dangers which no ken can foresee, and perhaps the blighting of the now cheering prospect of a Southern Confederacy, the publisher will devote their columns more particularly to the exposure of those dangers, and the ruinous consequences which will in all human probability grow out of ach action. He will further, by all just and honorable means in all human probability grow out of ach action. He will further, by all just and honorable means sustain the wise and prudent measures indicated by our State Legislature, in conformity with the suggestions of the Nasville Convention, which look to the harmonizing of sentiment, and soothing of prejudices in the Southern States, that by union among themselves, they might redress themselves effectually, without the postibility of incurring those evils which will certainly grow out of premature and hasty action. It is then sincerely hoped by the publisher, that the friends of co-operation, united action, or united secession as it may be called, throughout the State, will propmiptly aid him in thit enterprise. Upon them it mut depend for its support. If, as even the most violent advocates of immediate secession say, a Southern Confederacy is ultimately inevitable in the nature of thiugs, who shall we, who believe that premature action by this State will forever blight the hope, not raite our voices against it, and use all lawful means in our power to prevent it? Then aid us in this work; for we labor in its behalf.
