FOR THE ADVERTISER. SEPARATE STATE SECESSION :-- ITS EFFECTS ON SLAVERY.

Having sought to show that South Carolina as a separate State, will, by a moderate Tariff. derive ample revenue for all the purposes of a new government, and that she will be in a condition to maintain her independence and respectability, we propose now to consider some of what may be deemed the secondary effects of a surplus population. Providence in his bene-

It is urged, that, by insulating ourselves from the other Southern States, we will cut off every outlet by which we might get rid of our slaves, and will thereby bring upon the State the great evils of a redundant and valueless slave population. Let us examine the force of this argument Every one knows that the institution of slavery is already restricted to the States in which it now exists-having been, for all practical purposes, excluded not only from California, but from all the newly acquired Territory. The highhanded act of injustice and oppression, by which this object was accomplished, having been tamely acquiesced in, will continue as a stern political law, unless resistance to it be yet made by the Southern people. The other slave States, equally with South Carolina, are prevented from earrying their slaves into these Territories. Knowing then that they, also, have no outlet for their slaves, will not these States be placed under the same necessity as ourselves to guard against over-population? They will scarcely have less wisdom or precaution than ourselves. But in self-defence they will, in a short time, be driven to prohibit all further immigration of slaves into their borders; and that time cannot be remote; for many of the slave-holding States are very litthe behind South Carolina in denseness of population. We have to the sor, mile only about 20 inhabitants: Georgia has about 16: Kentucky, 20; Tennessee, 21; Alabama, 13; Mississippi, 13; Lou'siana, 9; Florida, 2; Tex: s, 1; Arkansus, 4. Georgia, Kentneky and Tennessee may therefore, in point of numbers, be placed, at this time, on a footing with our State. Alabama. Mississippi and Louisiana will, in a very few years, have a population to the sqr. mile equal to that of South Carolina at present; and will be driven, through fear of redundancy, to prohibit the further immigration of slaves. Florida, Arkansas and Texas will then be the only outlet for the supposed surplus slaves of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Kentucky and other States. But with the tide likely to pour in upon them from all these States, how long would it be before they, also, will be forced to adopt the same law of self-preservation? It is evident. that when it once becomes a "fixed fact," that slaves are to be permanently excluded from the new Territories and from California, all the Southern States, looking to this restriction and to the future increase of their inhabitants, will prohibit the further immigration of slaves into their borders; and this prohibition will certainly take place, long before there will be a surplus population in South Carolina Whether South Carolina, therefore, be in a separate condition, or in a Southern Confederacy, so long as slavery shall be excluded from the Territories, she will have to provide for the future increase of her slaves. There will be no natural outlet for fifem. Hence the argument as an objection to separate State secession, falls to the ground.

But the evils, complained of from the future own limits, will not be, we think, so great as of the highly profitable employments of compretended. For a long while, at least, the in- merce, mechanics and manufactures, and directed crease will be productive of the most beneficial exclusively to agricultural labor, what an imresults. We have suffered greatly in wealth and mense yield may reasonably be expected, when prosperity by emigration. A gradual increase of our lands have all been reduced to cultivation our inhabitants would but restore us to a health- and properly improved! The slaves, as they inful state of advancement. There is no danger of an over-population for centuries. We have seen that the population of South Carolina to the about 6,000,000 of agricultural laborers and sqr. mile is only 20. This gives about 30 acres manufacturers support by their productive labor, of land to every white and black soul in the State. Now here is evidently a great superabundance. This is entirely too much land to the among us? On this estimate, S. Carolina could population for a high state of prosperity. What degree of population is South Carolina capable of supporting? By the proper culture of her soil, and by the development of all her resources. it is fair to assume that she could sustain 250 to the sqr. mile. England has 300 to the sqr. mile; Holland 300; Belgium 330; and all the German States, which are almost exclusively agricultural and manufacturing, have from 100 to 300. Even the Chinese Empire, with its 1,640,000 sqr. miles, with scareely any foreign commerce, has over 130. Ancient Attica with 365,000 slaves, had a population of more than 700 to the sqr mile. With her great natural resources-her fertile soil-her rich iron minesher great facilities for every kind of manufacture-and her extensive and growing commerce: South Carolina will be able easily to sustain a population of 250 to the sqr. mile.

This will make space, in the limits of the State for about 8,000,000 of inhabitants. At and joy of the world. It will raise the drooppresent, there are in round numbers 650,000 .- ing hopes of the slave, and of the slaveless By a natural increase, how long, then, would it while men of the South. certain depression in the ratio of increase, not, perhaps, till a century later.

But it may be asked, what is to be done when the maximum is reached? It would be uselees to attempt to devise ways and means for the objects of remote posterity !- sufficient for the day is the evil thereof; but we may well conclude that our destiny will be that of other nations which have had, and which are vet to experience ficent purpose, usually sustains a just ratio between subsistence and population; and when by bad governments, or natural causes, that prop ton is de troyed, list rarely fails to plan measures either to prevent, or to provide for the surplus inhabitants of a country. What means may be employed in our particular case, it is not for finite mind to conceive. It would, at all events, from the remoteness of the period at which such an event is likely to happen, be an improper subject of discussion at present. It must fall to the duty of after generations, under the guidance of an all-wise and provident Creator. But it may well excite our anxiety to know. what will be the probable effects upon our wealth and prosperity of the increase of our population, if restricted to our own borders. We can only see into the future by the lights of the past. It s clear, as population increas s, so will also the productive industry of the state. This, as a natural result, will greatly multiply capital among us. And political Economy, based on the experience of nations, teaches, that "accumulated capital, gradually increasing, is a sure means of furnishing subsistence and for supporting and maintaining permanently a moderately increasing population." And this is, also, the strongest evidence of national prosperity. No fears, therefore, need be entertained as to the capacity of the state to provide for every reasonable increase of its population.

It is probable, that after a great while, when our numbers shall have reached several millions labor becoming cheaper, our slaves will, to some extent, depreciate in value; but, at the same time, by the great improvements in agriculture, which a dense population always introduces, the value of our lands will be greatly enhanced; and large and profitable investments will, also, be made in other branches of industry, as in manufactures, commerce &c., which will more than compensate for the diminution in the value of our slaves; while, by this transfer of slave value to objects more affixed to the soil, the removal of the slaves from our limits, should future circumstances render it necessary, will be greatly facilitated, and will be rendered less burdenous to the slave owner and to the state.

But for a great length of time, owing to the peculiar products of our soil, neither any considerable diminution in the value of the slave. nor any necessity for his removal from the State is likely to arise. Who can tell how neuch the fertility of our soil may be increased by judicious culture and by the use of manures? It has been found by experience, that a field, which in a natural state, produces but 15 bushels of wheat, may be made to produce 40. This has been actually done in England. In one whole county (Nolfork) not naturally very fertile, the average of farms is said to be from 30 to 35 bushels to the acre. Why may not the same degree of production be reached in South Carolina? Our soil is naturally more fertile than that of England. This improvement can be made, and it will be, when necessity urges to it.

Suppose then our slaves to be even kept out crease, could of themselves support the whole white population of the State. In Great Britain. about 10,000,000 of unproductive consumers. Why could not equal productiveness be realized among us? On this estimate, S. Carolina could maintain a population of from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000, and retain her slaves as valuable property. At all events, we may safely reckon on internal and external resources of wealth and prosperity for centuries yet to come before our slaves are likely to be rendered valueless, or before the are likely to be rendered valueless, or before the necessity of their removal from natural causes, and nurseries, admit with one accord, that for im-
