What is the use of reading the news to him, while he is so wholly unconcerned? The worst paragraph of casualties that I can find only draws from him a monosyllabic ejaculation, and, of course, a grin. It is seldom that he sighs, and when he does it is only a sigh of sympathy, and he smiles while he sighs.

What a pleasant world this would be if we all had more of the good qualities cultivated by Old Jolliffe—if we would try to be always kind and contented and happy!

It is said of some philanthropic person, who had engaged in a magnanimous enterprise, and lost, that they came out of it with nothing left but themselves. That was good property, however yourself is, after all, your only possession.

On the other hand, the richest woman we know is a farmer's wife, who finds so much happiness in loving her husband, making cheese, and caring for her children and chickens, and contemplating the goodness of God, that she has really more of that article than she knows what to do with, and takes every occasion to give it away to those who are in want, concealing it in

When opposite and within twenty paces of the house, they came to a sudden halt, and then he might be well-doing and happily circumstanced but for this folly! How many a crime would never have been committed had it not been for this social evil!

A great curse of American society is the folly, or, in many instances, rather the crime, of appearance making. How many a ruined family might be well-doing and happily circumstanced but for this folly! How many a crime would never have been committed had it not been for this social evil!

A rival poet, in describing his lady-love says: "She is as graceful as a water-lily, while her breath smells like an armful of clover!" His case is certainly approaching a crisis.

An ill-natural editor, a neighbor of ours, charges us with "diffusing ignorance." He condemns it. He usually condemns as much ignorance in a given space as if he worked with a hundred ass-power.

It is said of some philanthropic person, who had engaged in a magnanimous enterprise, and lost, that they came out of it with nothing left but themselves. That was good property, however yourself is, after all, your only possession.
