Take care of the Volunteers' Families. We honor Vice-President Stephens for his recommendation to the community to take care of the families of the volunteers. Many of these wolunteers have wives and children dependent on their daily labor, and that means of support they have nobly given up for the defence of the State. We hesitate not to say that citizens of means who do not open their purses, and aid in proportion to their ability in supporting the families of those who are fighting their battles, are enemies of the constry, and deserve the loathing and executions of all honest men. Look at the noble example which such men as Bruce, of Halifax, and many other Southern gentlemen of wealth, are setting. It is an example which all men of property will imitate if they have hearts, or, in the absence of the hearts, are guided by intelligent selfishness. The war of the Revolution could never have been achieved by the sword alone. The open purses of a generous people were "the sinews of that war." Whose battles is the soldier fighting? Are war. Whose natures is the somer againng: Are they any more his own than of those who remain behind? We heard the other day of a poor volunteer, whose family had literally not half a dellar to provide for their wants. Such cases need only be known to be remedied. There are hosts of generous people in our community who only need to know that such facts exist to apply the proper corrective. But there ought to be no exceptions. Every man of wealth ought to pour out his money for the common enuse as freely as others are pouring out their blood.

In this supposition you are perfectly correct. It affords me pleasure to be allowed this opportunity of testifying to the gallant spirit which characterised those composing the 1st Regiment of S. C. V., and to say that, so far as my acquaintance cried, "And here is mine!" and throwing up with them extends, the portion now in Virginia his gun shot him through the heart. The flag had no surperiors in this body of high spirited, was covered with blood. Jackson was shot brave and patriotic Carolinians. The language to which you refer was hastily penned and that too under much excitement, and will bear a construction which was never intended. Members of my own company, visiting the main camp, returned intoxicated ; some of them who, but a few ours before, were bitterly opposed to going to riginia, returned only to procure their knapsacks, handsome and durable assortment of solid colguns, &c. These facts, coupled with information ored and striped twilled cotton goods for solreceived, induced the language to which objection has been taken by members of the Regiment.
